Orders Six-Day Week In All Coal Mines

ICKES ACTS WHILE MINERS RESUME WORK

Tells Operators To Pay Time and a Half For Extra Day In Pits.

Both Sides Standing Pat on Original Demands For Final Settlement.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — Asserting that the deadlock between coal miners and operators remains the same as it has been, except that the miners have gone back to work for another 15 days, Fuels Administrator Harold L. Ickes today said the dispute would have to be settled by representatives of miners and operators "subject to approval by the War Labor board" which he said there was no means of by-passing.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Fuels Administrator Ickes today ordered a six-day week throughout the coal mining industry as work generally was resumed after a week-end strike crisis.

The order was telegraphed to approximately 4,850 mine operators now running their properties as agents for the government.

Ickes said mines failing to operate six days weekly would suffer cancellation of the price ceiling increases granted them by the office of price administration to cover the added costs of overtime pay.

Ickes' order to the mine operators went out as the first day of a two-week temporary truce found the miners busily digging the war vital fuel with Uncle Sam as their new boss. The fuel administrator's directive said:

"Since maximum prices have recently been increased by the office of price administration to permit operations of mines on a six-day week work basis you are to afford miners an opportunity to work six days each week and are to operate mines under your charge on that basis and to pay time and one-half or rate and one-half for sixth day of work as theretofore agreed upon by collective bargaining and previously cleared by war labor board.

"The government is relying

U. S. Builds Aerial Armada of 75,000 Planes Since Pearl Harbor, Produces 500 Heavy Bombers Per Month

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Production figures made public by WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson revealed today that the United States has built an aerial armada of nearly 75,000 planes in the 17 months since Pearl Harbor.

Although this figure originally was President Roosevelt's goal for the first year of war, the chief executive disclosed some time ago that the emphasis in plane production has been shifted to quality rather than quantity, with heavier craft coming off the assembly lines.

Mr. Roosevelt placed 1942 production at 48,000 military planes, while WPB Vice-Chairman William L. Batt a few days ago estimated this year's output at approximately 100,000. Something less than one-fourth of the latter figure was turned out in the first four months of 1943.

Nelson, in the ninth of a series of monthly reports of war production, said that the March output totaled 6,200 planes and he previously had informally estimated April production at near 7,000. Production for January and February was under last December's total of 5,489 planes.

Touching on all aspects of the nation's role as the "arsenal of democracy," the WPB chairman reported that munitions production in March advanced 11 per cent over that of February. On a daily average, however, there was little change since March had three days more than the preceding month.

As Nelson's report was made public the maritime commission announced that American shipyards again broke all records in April, turning out 157 new ships totaling

Push Germans Back Following Fall of Mateur

Big Guns Blast Ferryville, 10 Miles From Key Naval Base, As Second Allied Force Strikes Toward Tebourba, Gateway To Tunis.

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—Swift-driving American troops, quick to capitalize on their middle position after the seizure of Mateur, pounded forward hard today on the heels of the retreating Germans toward Ferryville, which is 10 miles to the northeast of the dock area of the naval base of Bizerte.

At the same time other forces fanned out toward the southeast and smashed to a point eight miles south of Mateur toward the line of the river, only six miles northwest of Tebourba, the gateway to Tunis.

After advancing about 10 miles the Americans were only 10 miles from Tebourba.

The British radio, in a broadcast recorded by CBS, said "long range Allied guns now have Ferryville under fire and several Axis airfields in the area have now been made untenable by shellfire." Ferryville, on the southwest shore of Lake Bizerte, is about eight miles from the naval base which is situated on the northeast shore. The broadcast said the Americans had "come up against a new line of resistance" in the advance on Ferryville.)

In the northeastward push, the Americans crossed the River Tine, despite the destruction of a bridge by the withdrawing forces of Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim, and shoved on toward Ferryville.

(The Tine, rising southwest of Mateur, flows northeastward a short distance east of Mateur and empties into the marshy land bordering Lake Achkel, one of the chain of lakes forming Bizerte's southern defenses.)

To the north of Lake Achkel the French African corps with its fierce Moroccan Goumiers and American elements pressed in upon Bizerte's western hill defenses threatening to flank the lakes.

There was no indication as yet how far the advanced elements of the American forces might be able to proceed toward Ferryville without meeting strong resistance.

A ridge as well as the watercourse, however, intervened between the Americans and Tebourba, the objective of the British First army.

(The American approach on Tebourba from the north threatened to outflank the Axis defenses in the Medjerda valley and open the way for a direct march by the British on Tunis.)

Allied troops along the rest of the 125-mile front failed to match the dramatic advances of the Americans, but the British First army made a slight advance in the hills 10 miles due north of Medjez-El-Bab on the flank of the Medjerda valley thrust.

The remainder of the front, held by the British and French, was alive with artillery fire and patrolling.

(The British radio said the Eighth army had opened a new attack north of Takrouna, five miles northwest of Enfidaville

WAR LOANS UP TO 8 MILLIONS

$300,000 Added To County's Total To Pass Original $6,649,700 Quota.

Given another $300,000 "shot in the arm" yesterday, Richland county's second War Loan drive today passed the $8,000,000 mark—and more reports of bond sales over the county are still coming in.

Addition of the $300,000 in bank subscriptions yesterday brought the total to $8,138,931.45. Reports from the postoffices and other bond issuing agencies over the county which must be cleared through the Federal Reserve bank in Cleveland are still to be added to the total.

More than $1,489,931 over the $6,649,000 quota, the drive has exceeded all quotas set for Mansfield, Shelby and the townships and villages. Of the entire quota for the county, $4,425,000 was to be raised by the public and $2,224,000 by the banks. To date the public has purchased $5,548,431.45 and the banks $2,590,500.

One of the large contributions to the drive was that of $12,950 made by the Westinghouse Employes Activities association. Every Westinghouse employe belongs to this organization which promotes athletics, music and dramatics among the workers.

FOOD PRICES OUT OF HAND, OPA ADMITS

Point To Spiraling Charges on Vegetables, See Little Chance of Quick Check.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTOON — Office of Price Administration officials admitted today that prices—particularly in the food line—are "practically out of control."

They pointed out that prices of fresh vegetables continue to spiral and that, beginning with the shipper—"who apparently does not know ceilings exist" — there is violation from the wholesaler on down.

This admission by OPA officials came less than a week after Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, replying to John L. Lewis' demands for higher wages for his miners to meet rising costs of living, promised to roll back "out of hand" prices, set ceiling on all important commodities, and bring violators of price ceilings to justice.

Since that promise was made last Friday, OPA officials admitted, there has been little progress in any of those directions. And many of them despaired that specific action would come in less than a month, if then.

An OPA spokesman said Brown's aides are "hard at work" trying to devise a plan to make price control work, but he said they have all but concluded that the only way out is through consumer cooperation in the field of enforcement.

OPA officials frankly admit that the price situation is acute. They are not only being pressed by the coal miners but by all the other major labor organizations to do something about the increasing cost of living. The AFL, CIO and Railroad Brotherhoods have threatened to seek higher wages, the "little steel" formula notwithstanding, unless prices are rolled back to the May 15, 1942 levels.

TABLES TURNED

Dutch Kidnap Nazi's Child, Hold Her as Hostage.

LONDON — (AP) — Reuters quoted the Istanbul correspondent of the French independent news agency today as saying Dutch patriots have kidnaped a daughter of Arthur Seysz-Inquart, German high commissioner of the Netherlands, and were holding her as a hostage. Dutch sources in London said they were unable to confirm the report.

The Istanbul account said the gestapo had been unable to find any trace of the girl.

The report said further that Dutch patriots had marked the death of 47 alleged traitors to Holland. Fourteen of these were said to have been killed already.

Today, a six-day week for all miners was ordered.

Joins Move To Get Flashers At Crossing Where 3 Died

The Richland County Auto club was ready to join Shelby city council today in a move to have warning flashers installed at the B. and O. crossing on State Route 39 where three Mansfielders lost their lives last Friday night.

Shelby council last night adopted a resolution asking the B. and O. railroad to place lights at the crossing five miles southeast of Shelby where a number of accidents have occurred in recent years. Copies of the resolution will be sent to the auto club and Mayor W. J. Locke, Shelby council members said.

Jack Berger, secretary of the auto club, said the organization would gladly join the campaign for flashers.

The auto club sought a better warning signal at the crossing about three years ago, but was turned down after a state highway survey showed traffic was not heavy enough over the crossing to warrant the expenditure, Berger said.

At that time, however, signs were erected which reflect automobile headlights, showing the location of the crossing.

Mayor Locke said he would have no comment to make on the Shelby council action until he has received a copy of the resolution.

Lieut. Krichbaum, representing the Ohio state defense is expected to investigate reported inefficiencies in the city's raid siren system and make recommendations to the council for improvements.

The mayor said no date has been set for the inspection visit, but Lieut. Krichbaum indicated he would be in the city probably within a week. The state OCD letter to the mayor did not say what the new plan of operation of basic and emergency warning system involves.

Close Conference With Plea To Spread Rotary Principles

Need for a further spread of Rotary principles as the nation and world builds toward postwar peace was emphasized last night when Rotarians representing 48 clubs in the 157th district of Rotary International closed their two-day conference here last night.

The plea was sounded by John Emmet Richards, of Alpena, Mich., representative of Rotary International, as he addressed the closing dinner meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel on the topic, "Building for Post-war Peace."

Attendance at yesterday's conference was boosted to 400 from the expected 250. Registration of members was near 300 while women in attendance exceeded 100, of whom 60 were at the luncheon-bridge at the Women's Club Monday afternoon.

Music at the closing dinner was provided by Eugene Weinberger, with a girls' octette from Senior high school giving several selections. Group singing was directed by L. E. Pete, song leader of the Ashland club. Harry B. Soulen, president of the Mansfield club, presided.

Resolutions presented by Victor Lytle of the Oberlin club, expressed appreciation of the cordiality of the host clubs, Mansfield, Ashland and Shelby.

JAPAN ADMITS WAR RESERVES RUNNING LOW

Official Says Material Will Last Only Short Period; Plane Loss Explained.

(By Associated Press)

A Japanese official called attention today to American and British war production and asserted that the mikado's armies now had reserve material left for only "a short period of the war."

A Tokyo broadcast quoted Kicanosuke Yamada, high war production official, as saying:

"The productive strength of America and Britain is pitted against the productive strength of our nation. Strength of production is strongest in America . . . Ships, planes and other things are being produced at a tremendous rate."

Other Pacific war developments:

AUSTRALIA — Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters disclosed that admittedly "heavy" Allied losses suffered in a battle Sunday over the Arafura sea off Darwin, Australia, were caused by violent winds—not by Japanese fighting skill.

A spokesman said Allied fighters pursued the Japanese raiders far out over the sea, and when they headed for home they ran into buffeting headwinds. Some were unable to land, others crash-landed on the Australian shore.

The extent of Allied losses was not given, but a spokesman said three pilots were missing after the battle against 21 enemy bombers and 30 fighters. At least 13 Japanese planes were destroyed, and it was considered likely that others failed to reach their home base in the bad weather.

BURMA — British headquarters said RAF bombers raided the big Japanese base at Akyab by day and night, setting fires, while other RAF planes strafed enemy troops along the Bay of Bengal coast farther north.

No change was noted in land fighting.

CHINA — U. S. army fliers were officially credited with blasting six Japanese planes out of the skies and probably destroying seven others in a running battle over Hunan Province. Only one American plane was lost.

Drowned 7 Weeks Ago, Girl's Body Found By Farmer

Relief from seven weeks of heartache came to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kemle at Crestline yesterday when the body of their seven-year-old daughter, Barbara, was recovered from a creek in which she was accidently drowned March 19.

Yesterday while walking near the stream which runs through his farm northwest of Crestline, William Keller saw the child's body in the creek bed, five miles from the place where she fell into the stream.

Though at the time of the child's drowning it was believed that the body might have been carried by the swift current into the Sandusky river, her father, certain that the body would be found, never in all the weeks since the accident has relented in his search. His faith was rewarded yesterday. Others in the Crestline vicinity had aided him.

POINTER: Vichy Sees Allied Moves Hinting Sardinia Blow

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The Vichy radio said today Allied movements reported simultaneously at Gibraltar and in Algerian waters may point to a large scale invasion attempt against Sicily and Sardinia, island stepping stones from North Africa to the European mainland. The broadcast was recorded by Reuters.

Germany's chief military commentators suggested in a broadcast that major Allied forces might pounce immediately on the two islands without waiting for the end of the campaign to drive the Axis out of Tunisia.

The German fear of landings on these islands has been betrayed by numerous broadcasts recently, and Capt. Ludwig Sertorius said last night:

"It is possible that the Allied high command has refrained from throwing in the mass of its reserves on the Tunisian front because it is planning a large scale landing operation. It may be planning a landing on the Sicilian or Sardinian coast even before the Tunisian campaign comes to an end."

The German commentator's forboding followed reports by the Nazi-controlled stations that a huge concentration of Allied shipping was being assembled at Gibraltar, including a number of landing barges.

Sertorious said the American Fifth army being held in reserve in Algeria and Morocco under

BOOSTED: U. S. Naval Strength Up 25 Per Cent Since Jan. 1

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—American forces have extended their grip on the southeastern Solomon islands by occupying the Russell islands, west of Guadalcanal, the navy announced today. This move gives them bases less than 100 miles from the nearest Japanese positions. The occupation was carried out in February without enemy opposition and our forces are "established" on the island.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox today revealed that the might and power of the United States fleet has been increased 25 per cent since Jan. 1 of this year.

In making this important disclosure the secretary announced that "we have arrived at the peak of construction of naval aircraft and ships." He said that during April more than 1,000 combat planes had been delivered to the navy's fighting forces.

The secretary at his news conference declined to give specific construction figures but said that for the first time the navy received combat planes totaling "in four figures."

Knox also said that warship and auxiliary vessel production set new records in April and that during the first four months of this year there was a 25 per cent increase in the numerical strength of the United States fleet and its auxiliaries.

As a result of escort ship and plane construction Knox stated that sinkings of merchant ships in the Atlantic in April were lower but warned that attacks might go up again at any time.

He added that April was an excellent month for ship construction, exclusive of small landing craft.

"The number of new vessels, except landing craft, during the first four months of this year

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

STOCKHOLM--(By Wireless)--Perhaps you can sense something about Sweden, as I do, from the fact that the most popular drama here is John Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down."

The play opened seven weeks ago. It moved later to a larger theater, where it is still going strong, picturing each night to a Swedish audience the Nazi occupation of Norway. The dominant theme of the play is the impossibility of crushing the spirit of a free people, which makes significant its great popularity in neutral Sweden, surrounded as it is by the Axis.

Clapper

I carried from America a copy of Wendell Willkie's new book, "One World," which is to be republished in a popular edition here—which also suggests something regarding the people here. For extremely few books can be brought over for republication, owing to the difficulties of transportation, and the selections are accordingly made with extreme care to hit the popular mood.

It would be a mistake to judge the neutrality of Sweden by the so-called neutrality of Spain. They are two different kinds of neutrals. We usually think of Spain as merely a puppet of the Axis. Spain is run by a Fascist regime whose future existence depends on Axis victory. The downfall of the Nazi-Fascist Axis will mean the downfall of the Fascist idea and of Fascist regimes. Hence Franco's fate is wrapped up in Axis victory.

Just the opposite is true in Sweden. This is a democratic country whose way of life would be violently changed by a final Axis victory. Sweden has next door the horrible example of Norway, whose democratic institutions have been crushed under the Nazi occupation. The Swedes know from these unhappy neighbors what that means. The people of Sweden know that they can continue to have their freedom only if the United Nations win.

Americans here whose judgment is sound agree on that size-up. They describe the Swedish press as one of the freest in the world. The right of criticism is jealously guarded.

The second point about Sweden is that she is determined to remain neutral. That is her traditional policy. The experience of other small nations occupied by Germany only strengthens the determination of Sweden to remain out of the war.

That is where her difficulties begin. There has been considerable popular criticism of the government's policy of allowing the Germans to send troops through Sweden into and out of Norway--on leave, so-called. Undoubtedly the Germans use that privilege as a means of replacing troops. Also, trainloads of Nazi war material move in as freight to Norway. Recent student demonstrations at Upsala university had their roots in the popular disapproval of the use of Sweden as a traffic route for the Germans. Pro-Ally newspapers criticize the continuation of this traffic. And recently Premier Hansson said this traffic was one of the burdens Sweden was forced to carry.

Sweden hes close to the paths of both belligerents and is completely surrounded by the Axis. Therefore she is constantly under the necessity of protesting, as has happened since I arrived here, when a protest was made to Russia over bombs dropping near Karlskrona, and one to the British because of a plane flying over Swedish territory. But the stiffest notes were sent to Berlin over the recent firing on a Swedish submarine. And the feeling is accentuated because of Germany's refusal to allow a resumption of the safe-conduct arrangement whereby five ships had been allowed to come in each month through the British and German blockades, and an equal number to go through the British and German blockades, and an equal number to go out. The Germans stopped allowing ships to come in the first of the year, and Swedish ships are now unable to get in with wheat, leather and foodstuffs from South America. There is much resentment about this.

On the way here I saw four such Swedish ships tied up at the Azores and at Lisbon. The result is beginning to be felt. The new shoe ration allows one pair for 18 months. Food is bound to be cut down.

Yet Sweden remains determined to find a way to stay neutral.

JOB TRANSFER BAN EFFECTIVE BY AGREEMENTS

WMC Gets All Features of National Service Act Except Labor Draft.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The war manpower commission will have all features of a national service act, except for drafting of labor, in operation by this week-end.

Through regional employment stabilization agreements it will be restricting all transfers within essential activities, regardless of the wage question involved.

The scope of the regional agreements, now covering all but a handful of states which will be brought under controls in the next few days, was revealed by War Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt at his press conference late yesterday.

Previously he had been preparing a nationwide employment stabilization order which would have accomplished the same goal as the regional plans, effective reduction of labor turnover. But this plan was dropped.

The only legislated authority for controlling transfers comes from the stabilization act of Oct. 2, 1942, which permits the executive branch of the government to peg wages. Under this authority, President Roosevelt directed McNutt to restrict workers from getting higher wages through transfers unless the change would aid prosecution of the war.

There is no legal authority for controlling transfers from one job to another if the wages remain unchanged or are lowered.

However, by the mechanism of agreements between management and labor on the regional level, the WMC is able to attain the same end. Then if an employer or worker violates the agreement he is breaking faith with other employers or workers.

McNutt has carefully left the door open to job changes that would benefit the war effort by placing no restrictions on changes from non-essential to essential activities, thereby trying to tempt workers from the unnecessary occupation to the necessary occupation by making it possible for them to get higher wages.

At the same time, he has protected those who might be laid off, fired, not given full-time employment, or who might be suffering hardships or have compelling personal reasons, to transfer by obtaining a transfer certificate from his employer or the WMC. Indirectly, these reasons affect the productive capacity of the worker in the war effort.

Redistricting Measure Up For Reconsideration In Senate After Failure To Pass.

The 17th congressional district, with Mansfield as the largest city and focal point, would be unchanged under the Sheppard bill to revise Ohio congressional district in 1951. The senate is scheduled today to re-consider the vote by which it defeated the bill last night.

As it stands, the 17th district comprises six counties and normally is Republican. In the district are Richland, Ashland, Knox, Coshocton, Licking, and Delaware counties.

Since Mansfield is the largest city in the district, nominating petitions for district offices are filed here and the Richland county election board tabulates election returns for the six-county area as they concern district offices.

Here are the changes that would be made in Ohio districts if the Sheppard bill is voted into law:

The present 5th district would be divided: Fulton and Henry counties would join the present 13th district; Williams, Defiance, Paulding, Van Wert and Putnam counties would join the present 8th district.

Ottawa county, now in the 9th, would join the 13th district, Lucas would become the 9th.

Northern Summit county including Akron, in the present 14th would become the 14th district; the remaining counties of the present 14th district, (Loram, Medina, Portage and southern Summit) would become the new 5th district.

The present 10th district would join Pickaway, Ross and Hocking counties of the present 11th as the new 11th; Fairfield and Perry counties of the present 11th would join the 15th.

Mahoning county, now in the 19th, would become the 19th; Ashtabula and Trumbull counties, now in the 19th, would become the new 10th.

Western Cuyahoga county would become the 20th; southcentral Cuyahoga, the 21st; southeastern Cuyahoga would join Geauga as the 22nd; northeastern Cuyahoga would join Lake county as the new 23rd.

A new boundary would be drawn between the 1st and 2nd districts in Hamilton county.

Hailed by its sponsors as a statesmanlike proposal to equalize Ohio's congressional representation and criticized by opponents as a threat to the two-party system, the bill of Sen. Carl D. Shepard, R., Summit, failed passage by two votes last night.

But friends of the bill got reconsideration, hoping that the votes of several absent members last night might be sufficient to win approval for the plan.

Sen. William M. Boyd, minority Democratic leader, last night swung his support to Sheppard's redistricting plan.

"Time and again the people have asked the Ohio legislature to have courage enough to set aside personal ambitions so the state might have something resembling equal representation, Boyd said. "There is need for a change when one district of 600,000 has but one congressman while the same number of people in other parts of the state have two representatives."

The bill would create a new 23rd district including Lake county and part of Cuyahoga county, eliminating election of a congressman-at-large.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

May On Broadway.

THIS is the time of year when--come hail or high water, which it frequently does--a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of nonsense, and young ladies fancy frolicksome furbelows to enchant their furloughing beaux. SURPRISED OVER PULITZER AWARD

Literary Circles' Favorites Go Down as Sinclair, Wilder Get Prizes.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK — Literary and dramatic circles expressed surprise today that the 1942 Pulitzer prizes had been awarded for Upton Sinclair's novel, "Dragon's Teeth," and Thornton Wilder's play, "The Skin of Our Teeth."

Chief surprise was at the award for the most distinguished novel published by an American author, for "Dragon's Teeth" received only one vote out of 25 in the recent Saturday Review of Literature Pulitzer prize poll. First place in the poll went to "Look to the Mountain" by Le Grand Cannon, jr.

"The Skin of Our Teeth" was voted down by the New York drama critics circle last month for its annual prize after a hard-fought contest with Sidney Kingsley's play, "The Patriots."

Columbia's trustees also differed with the Saturday Review of Literature poll of critics in the selection of the history award, giving the prize to Esther Forbes for "Paul Revere and the World He Lived In."

"Lee's Lieutenants" by Douglas Southall Freeman won in the Saturday Review poll.

HOLDS MUSIC EVENT FRIDAY

Springfield Township Grade Schools to Present Program.

Spring grade musical of Springfield township school will be held Friday at 8:15 p. m. in the school auditorium.

Junior orchestra will open the program with a musical selection, followed by songs by the seventh and eighth grade chorus.

Robert Krause will present a violin solo, followed by the operetta, "Circus Parade," by the first, second and third grades. Fourth, fifth and sixth grades will sing musical numbers as the finale.

The program is under the direction of Eureta B. Schuff, music director.

Up and Down THE STREET

Among the more novel ways devised by Mansfielders for aiding the war effort is the plan of Mrs. Lloyd Stricker, 412 Woodland avenue. She composed two songs, "Dawn's First Beam" and "Keep A Silver Lining Shining," had them published, and is devoting proceeds of sales to the purchase of war bonds. To promote sale of the songs Mrs. Stricker also wrote a play which has been produced by the Parent Teacher association at Dorset, Ohio, and the Grange at Kingsville. The songs as well as a diary "My Son," in poetry form, have been contributed for use by Blue Star Mothers and USO clubs.

"You should have seen the one that got away" is not the story of Mrs. Walter Chilcote, fisherwoman par excellence. She was saying today, "You should see the fish I caught" and she had the fish to prove it. In a small creek two miles east of Bellville she landed a six and three-quarter pound buffalo sucker which measured 28½ inches in length. A record for this vicinity, fishermen and fishwomen?

Mansfield knitters who have been waiting for a new shipment of yarn to arrive at Red Cross headquarters can now resume knitting activities. Twenty-four boxes of yarn arrived at the Red Cross office today. Included in the shipment is gray yarn for knee bands and stump socks for hospital use, army yarn for sleeveless sweaters, gloves, helmets and mufflers, and Navy yarn for turtle-neck sweaters and watch caps.

TRIAL DELAYED

LOGANSPORT, Ind.—(AP)—The trial of Stella Walsh of Cleveland, 31 year old former Olympic runner, arrested here last November in connection with the theft of clothing from a local store, has been postponed from May 10 to June 14 at the defense's request.

MALONE RETAINS BOARD POSITION

Re-Appointed For Five-Year Term To County Board of Health Monday.

Verle Malone, Shelby, R. D 4, yesterday was re-appointed to the Richland county board of health for a five-year term by the county health advisory council at its annual session.

Malone has served for several months on the board, succeeding J. F. Bumpus of Butler who resigned last year to take a war job.

The council heard the annual report compiled by Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, which showed a marked decline in the number of communicable diseases last year in the county area.

The resignation of Dr. Mabel Emery, child hygiene physician, was submitted to the Mansfield health board at its meeting last night. Dr. Emery's resignation is effective May 15, concluding one year of service. The board praised her for her work with county children. She resigned because of the pressure of work, she said.

Dr. A. C. Biddle, Mansfield, city staff physician in charge of indigent cases, was recommended as her successor. The appointment must be made, however, by the state health department.

Dr. Wild submitted his monthly report which showed marked increases in cases of mumps, chickenpox, and German measles in April. Cases of mumps jumped to 48 from 27 in March, while there were 76 cases of chickenpox as against 40 in March. Fifty-four cases of German measles were reported last month as compared with four cases of measles, same as in March.

DEALERS FROM 4 CITIES MEET

'Conservice School' Being Sponsored By Westinghouse.

Westinghouse dealers and service men from Mansfield, Galion, Bucyrus and Bellevue assembled at the Mansfield-Leland hotel yesterday for a two-day "Conservice school."

"Conservation" and "servicing" of electrical appliances which must be made to last for the duration formed the basis of the word coined to characterize the series of sessions.

Mrs. Marie E. Hardy, Ohio Public Service company service expert, is among the instructors teaching the assembled repairmen and dealers new methods of keeping appliances in working order. Those attending the sessions learn from illustrated lectures, step-by-step procedure movies, and practice on miniature models.

TAXI PASSENGER

Mrs. Sidney Smith, 67, of 268 South Main street, who was injured in an automobile-taxicab collision yesterday was a passenger in the Service cab instead of the car driven by Robert K. Miller as the News-Journal erroneously reported.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Jennifer Jones is a Hollywood paradox, and that's putting it mildly. The charming, clear-eyed young actress reversed the usual procedure of climbing up the ladder of screen success by starting out at the top, and she shows all the determination and ability to stay there.

Unheralded and entirely devoid of the usual Hollywood publicity-bathing suit buildup, Jennifer is traveling rapidly the road to fame and acclaim by playing the coveted title role in "The Song of Bernadette." Franz Werfel's touching story of the little French girl whose vision created the miraculous shrine of Lourdes and who later was canonized by the Catholic church.

Coons

Many of Hollywood's top actresses would have turned in their last year's husbands for a shot at the role of Bernadette.

The quiet, unassuming Jennifer qualified to play Bernadette when her recreation to a simulated vision during her screen test so impressed the producers that she was signed on the dotted line before she could catch her breath. She won out over a myriad of candidates for the role.

Before getting her big chance, Jennifer had a previous attempt at Hollywood fame at a small studio when she was 19. After giving a couple of horse operas a whirl, she returned to New York where she married and found time in between stage roles to have two lovely children.

Two years ago she was tested for the title role of the play "Claudia" for the Chicago company. In her own words, the test was a "fizzle" and she returned to her modest home in Garden City, N. Y., somewhat alarmed for the future of her career.

The next day the telephone buzzed and she was told to meet David O. Selznick's representative in New York. She didn't get the role, but she did receive a contract from Selznick, and she now is one of his most valuable properties.

Her background for the role of Bernadette borders on the perfect. She was educated at a convent conducted by the Benedictine Sisters, in Tulsa, Okla., and during her summers she played in stock companies touring Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas.

Her lifelong ambition has been acting, and the Bernadette role gives her all the leeway necessary to fulfill that ambition. So watch this little Jones girl who figures there is only one rung on the ladder of success—the top one.

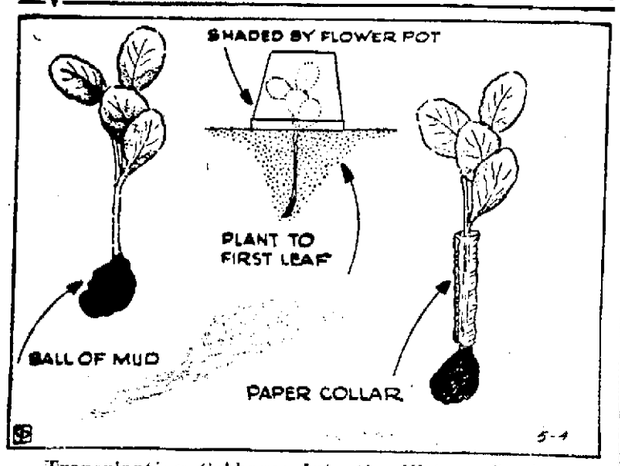
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Transplanting Cabbages Into the Victory Garden.

(Released by Central Press Association)

VICTORY GARDEN beginners are apt to assume that cabbage plants are tough and therefore give them little consideration and care. This, of course, is a mistake, for care in transplanting cabbage plants is needed. If given proper care in transplanting the plants will respond to it and will not wilt down before their roots have taken hold. When properly protected the cabbage plants are better able to withstand insect enemies and disease.

If the young plants are to be lifted from a flat for transplanting it is best to water the plants a short time before handling them so that the soil will be moist enough to cling to their roots in a ball, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

Cabbage plants can be transplanted with safety even during dry weather if they are set deep in the soil, that is, with the soil coming up to the first leaf, as illustrated. Make the hole deep enough to permit the roots of the plant to be placed straight down without crowding them. Firm the soil against the length of both roots and stem to prevent the formation of air pockets. Water the plants thoroughly and protect them from the sun for a day or two by covering with flower pots, berry boxes or newspapers, as illustrated.

The plants can also be protected against the attacks of cutworms by wrapping a four-inch collar of paper around the stem of each plant when transplanting it, as illustrated. Allow the paper collar to extend about one and one-half or two inches above the soil level about the plants.

He served in World war I as an army surgeon. His father was on the staff of Gen. Phil Sheridan.

Legal Aid Clinic Solves Problems Of Flying Cadets

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. —(INS)— The worried flying cadet wanted to know if he was married, and the San Antonio Aviation Cadet Center's Legal Aid clinic got the answer.

The young woman with whom he had gone through a marriage ceremony had told him her husband, a sergeant in a foreign port, was dead.

Legal Aid checked with Washington; the sergeant wasn't reported on any casualty list. They informed the cadet, two days after he submitted his question, that he wasn't married.

Members of the San Antonio Bar association take turns making a weekly visit to the Cadet Center, providing their services without charge for all the legal red tape that might otherwise be distracting a pilot trying to earn his wings. They make wills, arrange divorces, help out romances, and answer all sorts of questions.

ARRESTS DOWN

ROANOKE, N. C. —(U.P.)— Roanoke can attribute its decreasing jail population to whisky rationing and jobs offered by war industry.

City Jailer J. C. James said, "We had only 76 guests for dinner the other day. Rationing of whisky by the ABC board has reduced the number of 'Monday morning' drunks appreciably."

According to James, the jail's population is 180 and for years the jail capacity has run around that figure.

SOLID UNITY ON HOME FRONT WANTED BY MEN IN SERVICE

(By International News Service)

MOBILE, Ala. A lot more planes and a lot more ships—but most of all the boys on the American battle fronts want to get news about solid unity on the home front, Ensign C. L. Adams, who participated in the Battle of Midway, said while on a brief visit home from the wars.

"When a fighting man picks up a newspaper and reads of disputes at home, it doesn't set so good with him," Ensign Adams said. He added:

"He's depending on those at home. He realized that he can't strike and he wonders why those who are building for victory hold up shipments of necessary materials of war."

Those were strong words from a mere ensign, but as one who has been in navy service for eight years, and who has been in the thick of the battle against the Japanese, Adams seemed to be speaking the sentiments of the ordinary fighting man of the line.

"If every man who holds up the war effort were put in uniform and given a little taste of the hell overseas," he said, "he'd be willing and glad to come back to the States and work and sweat every day until this fight is over."

As for himself, Adams said, he was glad to see his wife, but he didn't want too long a furlough in these critical times. "I'd sure like to get back in there and scrap some more," he said.

WHICH IS WHICH?

SEASIDE, Ore. —(U.P.)— Charles and John Hickey, 18-year-old twins, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Hickey, are stationed with the navy at Norfolk, Va. They report that since receiving regulation navy haircuts, their associates cannot tell which is which.

Ravens Imitate Fighter Planes In Aleutians

AN ARMY OUTPOST IN THE ALEUTIANS —(U.P.)— Even the wildlife in the Aleutians has been militarized, according to Capt. Arron Blewitt, of Cul De Sac, Idaho, company commander of a unit camped in a wild valley on the slopes of an Aleutian volcano.

"Since our arrival here," Captain Blewitt said, "the blue foxes have learned to stand in the chow line and the ravens are beginning to fly in military formations."

The men in Captain Blewitt's company support his assertions that the fat, playful, highly intelligent ravens imitate the maneuvers of fighter planes based in the Aleutians. They maintain that the birds not only fly in echelons and peel off in attack dives, but they also occasionally poke fun at the air corps by making extremely bumpy and unbirdlike landings.

TELEPHONE 4251-6

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

STOCKHOLM--(By Wireless)—Perhaps you can sense something about Sweden, as I do, from the fact that the most popular drama here is John Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down."

The play opened seven weeks ago. It moved later to a larger theater, where it is still going strong, picturing each night to a Swedish audience the Nazi occupation of Norway. The dominant theme of the play is the impossibility of crushing the spirit of a free people, which makes significant its great popularity in neutral Sweden, surrounded as it is by the Axis.

Clapper

I carried from America a copy of Wendell Willkie's new book, "One World," which is to be republished in a popular edition here—which also suggests something regarding the people here. For extremely few books can be brought over for republication, owing to the difficulties of transportation, and the selections are accordingly made with extreme care to hit the popular mood.

It would be a mistake to judge the neutrality of Sweden by the so-called neutrality of Spain. They are two different kinds of neutrals. We usually think of Spain as merely a puppet of the Axis. Spain is run by a Fascist regime whose future existence depends on Axis victory. The downfall of the Nazi-Fascist Axis will mean the downfall of the Fascist idea and of Fascist regimes. Hence Franco's fate is wrapped up in Axis victory.

Just the opposite is true in Sweden. This is a democratic country whose way of life would be violently changed by a final Axis victory. Sweden has next door the horrible example of Norway, whose democratic institutions have been crushed under the Nazi occupation. The Swedes know from these unhappy neighbors what that means. The people of Sweden know that they can continue to have their freedom only if the United Nations win.

Americans here whose judgment is sound agree on that size-up. They describe the Swedish press as one of the freest in the world. The right of criticism is jealously guarded.

The second point about Sweden is that she is determined to remain neutral. That is her traditional policy. The experience of other small nations occupied by Germany only strengthens the determination of Sweden to remain out of the war.

That is where her difficulties begin. There has been considerable popular criticism of the government's policy of allowing the Germans to send troops through Sweden into and out of Norway—on leave, so-called. Undoubtedly the Germans use that privilege as a means of replacing troops. Also, trainloads of Nazi war material move in as freight to Norway. Recent student demonstrations at Upsala university had their roots in the popular disapproval of the use of Sweden as a traffic route for the Germans. Pro-Ally newspapers criticize the continuation of this traffic. And recently Premier Hansson said this traffic was one of the burdens Sweden was forced to carry.

Sweden lies close to the paths of both belligerents and is completely surrounded by the Axis. Therefore she is constantly under the necessity of protesting, as has happened since I arrived here, when a protest was made to Russia over bombs dropping near Karlskrona, and one to the British because of a plane flying over Swedish territory. But the stiffest notes were sent to Berlin over the recent firing on a Swedish submarine. And the feeling is accentuated because of Germany's refusal to allow a resumption of the safe-conduct arrangement whereby five ships had been allowed to come in each month through the British and German blockades, and an equal number to go through the British and German blockades, and an equal number to go out. The Germans stopped allowing ships to come in the first of the year, and Swedish ships are now unable to get in with wheat, leather and foodstuffs from South America. There is much resentment about this.

On the way here I saw four such Swedish ships tied up at the Azores and at Lisbon. The result is beginning to be felt. The new shoe ration allows one pair for 18 months. Food is bound to be cut down.

Yet Sweden remains determined to find a way to stay neutral.

JOB TRANSFER BAN EFFECTIVE BY AGREEMENTS

WMC Gets All Features of National Service Act Except Labor Draft.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The war manpower commission will have all features of a national service act, except for drafting of labor, in operation by this week-end.

Through regional employment stabilization agreements it will be restricting all transfers within essential activities, regardless of the wage question involved.

The scope of the regional agreements, now covering all but a handful of states which will be brought under controls in the next few days, was revealed by War Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt at his press conference late yesterday.

Previously he had been preparing a nationwide employment stabilization order which would have accomplished the same goal as the regional plans, effective reduction of labor turnover. But this plan was dropped.

The only legislated authority for controlling transfers comes from the stabilization act of Oct. 2, 1942, which permits the executive branch of the government to peg wages. Under this authority, President Roosevelt directed McNutt to restrict workers from getting higher wages through transfers unless the change would aid prosecution of the war.

There is no legal authority for controlling transfers from one job to another if the wages remain unchanged or are lowered.

However, by the mechanism of agreements between management and labor on the regional level, the WMC is able to attain the same end. Then if an employer or worker violates the agreement he is breaking faith with other employers or workers.

McNutt has carefully left the door open to job changes that would benefit the war effort by placing no restrictions on changes from non-essential to essential activities, thereby trying to tempt workers from the unnecessary occupation to the necessary occupation by making it possible for them to get higher wages.

At the same time, he has protected those who might be laid off, fired, not given full-time employment, or who might be suffering hardships or have compelling personal reasons, to transfer by obtaining a transfer certificate from his employer or the WMC. Indirectly, these reasons affect the productive capacity of the worker in the war effort.

Redistricting Measure Up For Reconsideration In Senate After Failure To Pass.

The 17th congressional district, with Mansfield as the largest city and focal point, would be unchanged under the Sheppard bill to revise Ohio congressional district in 1951. The senate is scheduled today to re-consider the vote by which it defeated the bill last night.

As it stands, the 17th district comprises six counties and normally is Republican. In the district are Richland, Ashland, Knox, Coshocton, Licking, and Delaware counties.

Since Mansfield is the largest city in the district, nominating petitions for district offices are filed here and the Richland county election board tabulates election returns for the six-county area as they concern district offices.

Here are the changes that would be made in Ohio districts if the Sheppard bill is voted into law.

The present 5th district would be divided: Fulton and Henry counties would join the present 13th district; Williams, Defiance, Paulding, Van Wert and Putnam counties would join the present 8th district.

Ottawa county, now in the 9th, would join the 13th district; Lucas would become the 9th.

Northern Summit county including Akron, in the present 14th would become the 14th district; the remaining counties of the present 14th district, (Lorain, Medina, Portage and southern Summit) would become the new 5th district.

The present 10th district would join Pickaway, Ross and Hocking counties of the present 11th as the new 11th; Fairfield and Perry counties of the present 11th would join the 15th.

Mahoning county, now in the 19th, would become the 19th; Ashtabula and Trumbull counties, now in the 19th, would become the new 10th.

Western Cuyahoga county would become the 20th; south-central Cuyahoga, the 21st; southeastern Cuyahoga would join Geauga as the 22nd; northeastern Cuyahoga would join Lake county as the new 23rd.

A new boundary would be drawn between the 1st and 2nd districts in Hamilton county.

Hailed by its sponsors as a statesmanlike proposal to equalize Ohio's congressional representation and criticized by opponents as a threat to the two-party system, the bill of Sen. Carl D. Shepard, R., Summit, failed passage by two votes last night.

But friends of the bill got reconsideration, hoping that the votes of several absent members last night might be sufficient to win approval for the plan.

Sen. William M. Boyd, minority Democratic leader, last night swung his support to Sheppard's redistricting plan.

"Time and again the people have asked the Ohio legislature to have courage enough to set aside personal ambitions so the state might have something resembling equal representation, Boyd said. "There is need for a change when one district of 600,000 has but one congressman while the same number of people in other parts of the state have two representatives."

The bill would create a new 23rd district including Lake county and part of Cuyahoga county, eliminating election of a congressman-at-large.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

May On Broadway.

THIS is the time of year when—come hail or high water, which it frequently does—a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of nonsense, and young ladies fancy frolicksome furbelows to enchant their furloughing beaux. It's the season, suddenly, for sonnets chalk-etched on the sidewalks and day dreams in the class room. On Broadway cynics go soft and jitterbugs slow down to a waltz and seasonal changes are evident in everything from modes to moods to menus.

In the Big City Mom may not be in the kitchen putting up preserves for next winter and Junior may not be evading the truant officer to go fishing where no fishing is allowed, but you can tell it's spring—you can see it, feel it, smell it—just the same.

SURPRISED OVER PULITZER AWARD

Literary Circles' Favorites Go Down as Sinclair, Wilder Get Prizes.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK -- Literary and dramatic circles expressed surprise today that the 1942 Pulitzer prizes had been awarded for Upton Sinclair's novel, "Dragon's Teeth," and Thornton Wilder's play, "The Skin of Our Teeth."

Chief surprise was at the award for the most distinguished novel published by an American author, for "Dragon's Teeth" received only one vote out of 25 in the recent Saturday Review of Literature Pulitzer prize poll. First place in the poll went to "Look to the Mountain" by Le Grand Cannon, jr.

"The Skin of Our Teeth" was voted down by the New York drama critics circle last month for its annual prize after a hard-fought contest with Sidney Kingsley's play, "The Patriots."

Columbia's trustees also differed with the Saturday Review of Literature poll of critics in the selection of the history award, giving the prize to Esther Forbes for "Paul Revere and the World He Lived In."

"Lee's Lieutenants" by Douglas Southall Freeman won in the Saturday Review poll.

The program is under the direction of Eureta B. Schuff, music director.

Up and Down THE STREET

Among the more novel ways devised by Manstielders for aiding the war effort is the plan of Mrs. Lloyd Stricker, 142 Woodland avenue. She composed two songs, "Dawn's First Beam" and "Keep A Silver Lining Shining," had them published, and is devoting proceeds of sales to the purchase of war bonds. To promote sale of the songs Mrs. Stricker also wrote a play which has been produced by the Parent Teacher association at Dorset, Ohio, and the Grange at Kingsville. The songs as well as a diary "My Son," in poetry form, have been contributed for use by Blue Star Mothers and USO clubs.

MALONE RETAINS BOARD POSITION

Re-Appointed For Five-Year Term To County Board of Health Monday.

Verle Malone, Shelby, R. D 4, yesterday was re-appointed to the Richland county board of health for a five-year term by the county health advisory council at its annual session.

Malone has served for several months on the board, succeeding J. F. Bumpus of Butler who resigned last year to take a war job.

The council heard the annual report compiled by Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, which showed a marked decline in the number of communicable diseases last year in the county area.

The resignation of Dr. Mabel Emery, child hygiene physician, was submitted to the Mansfield health board at its meeting last night. Dr. Emery's resignation is effective May 15, concluding one year of service. The board praised her for her work with county children. She resigned because of the pressure of work, she said.

Dr. A. C. Biddle, Mansfield, city staff physician in charge of indigent cases, was recommended as her successor. The appointment must be made, however, by the state health department.

Dr. Wild submitted his monthly report which showed marked increases in cases of mumps, chickenpox, and German measles in April. Cases of mumps jumped to 48 from 27 in March, while there were 76 cases of chickenpox as against 40 in March. Fifty-four cases of German measles were reported last month as compared with four cases of measles, same as in March.

DEALERS FROM 4 CITIES MEET

'Conservice School' Being Sponsored By Westinghouse.

Westinghouse dealers and service men from Mansfield, Galion, Bucyrus and Bellevue assembled at the Mansfield-Leland hotel yesterday for a two-day "Conservice school."

"Conservation" and "servicing" of electrical appliances which must be made to last for the duration formed the basis of the word coined to characterize the series of sessions.

Mrs. Marie E. Hardy, Ohio Public Service company service expert, is among the instructors teaching the assembled repairmen and dealers new methods of keeping appliances in working order. Those attending the sessions learn from illustrated lectures, step-by-step procedure movies, and practice on miniature models.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Jennifer Jones is a Hollywood paradox, and that's putting it mildly. The charming, clear-eyed young actress reversed the usual procedure of climbing up the ladder of screen success by starting out at the top, and she shows all the determination and ability to stay there.

Unheralded and entirely devoid of the usual Hollywood publicity-bathing suit buildup, Jennifer is traveling rapidly the road to fame and acclaim by playing the coveted title role in "The Song of Bernadette." Franz Werfel's touching story of the little French girl whose vision created the miraculous shrine of Lourdes and who later was canonized by the Catholic church.

Coons

Many of Hollywood's top actresses would have turned in their last year's husbands for a shot at the role of Bernadette.

The quiet, unassuming Jennifer qualified to play Bernadette when her recreation to a simulated vision during her screen test so impressed the producers that she was signed on the dotted line before she could catch her breath. She won out over a myriad of candidates for the role.

Before getting her big chance, Jennifer had a previous attempt at Hollywood fame at a small studio when she was 19. After giving a couple of horse operas a whirl, she returned to New York where she married and found time in between stage roles to have two lovely children.

Two years ago she was tested for the title role of the play "Claudia" for the Chicago company. In her own words, the test was a "fizzle" and she returned to her modest home in Garden City, N. Y., somewhat alarmed for the future of her career.

The next day the telephone buzzed and she was told to meet David O. Selznick's representative in New York. She didn't get the role, but she did receive a contract from Selznick, and she now is one of his most valuable properties.

Her background for the role of Bernadette borders on the perfect. She was educated at a convent conducted by the Benedictine Sisters, in Tulsa, Okla., and during her summers she played in stock companies touring Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas.

Her lifelong ambition has been acting, and the Bernadette role gives her all the leeway necessary to fulfill that ambition. So watch this little Jones girl who figures there is only one rung on the ladder of success—the top one.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

Gowen Field,
Boise, Idaho.

Hi Rex: About 300 of us GI's were privileged to witness 25 rounds of boxing tonight. The bouts were put on by the various squadrons on the field and were of three rounds each with the usual three minutes to the round.

All of the fighters were rookies in the ring. Some of the matches were because of grudges, others were friendly inter-squadron bouts.

As I said before, these boys were strictly amateurs. There wasn't much science to their boxing, but they sure made the leather fly. Talk about a clean bunch of boys, these were tops in spite of the fact that they are taught to overcome the foe and do it any way possible.

And what was I doing while all this fighting was going on? Why I was standing outside the ring yelling "Give him a left" just as the rest of the crowd was doing.

You won't get me in a ring. I'm too good of a rooter.

The most comical part of the session was the argument between the various states. When a fighter was announced, the state he hailed from was also included. This would bring him a cheer from the boys of the same state. Meanwhile the other 47 states booed.

The whole thing would end up in a mess of arguments as to which state was the best. Of course, as you would guess, the boys from Brooklyn got the largest chorus of boos.

So you can see by this, Rex, that even if we servicemen are away from home sports, we can still witness and participate in sports in the hundreds of army camps.

Yours truly,
Cpl. Dick Schwab.

And that's another letter from one of my old golfing playmates, and a former News-Journal nibluck swinger.

Dick has been doing a lot of traveling lately on transfers from Fort Bragg N. C., to Detroit to Salt Lake City to Boise.

And now he's in a position to tell me the answer to a question that has long bothered me.

Jake Powell Clouts Apple

Ex-Yankee Clubs Ball In Association Ranks.

By Associated Press)

WHILE American Association baseball teams are on the road today, it's as good a time as any to sum up the fantastic doings of little Jack Powell the ex-New York Yankee now an outfielder for St. Paul.

Currently, the Saints are in last place with only one win in five games, but the 33-year-old Powell is determined they won't remain there.

He's just about the hottest batter in the league.

Powell gave up only seven runs in four innings indicating that as a hurler he's a better outfielder.

Milwaukee's 10 to 5 decision over the Saints yesterday gave the Brewers two wins in the three-game series. In that one Powell clubbed a gaudy .667 getting 8 for 12 including six extra base hits—three doubles, one triple and two homers. He drove in four runs.

In the meantime, Columbus moved into the lead by wringing a 1-0 verdict from Indianapolis in a 13-inning morning game played before only 406 fans.

Kansas City swung into a deadlock for second place with Minneapolis and Milwaukee by beating the Millers, 5-4.

Louisville's game at Toledo was postponed.

WANTS CLEVELAND TO BUY LEAGUE PARK

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Municipal ownership of League park, home of the Cleveland Baseball company, was proposed at city hall last night by Councilman James G. Colonel.

The legislator suggested the city purchase the property for use as a recreation area and center of a housing project.

The Cleveland Indians play most of their home games at League park, transferring to the more spacious Municipal stadium for Sunday and holiday contests.

Players Shuffled Around

Manpower Shortage Calls For Versatility.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

THE most valuable player competition in the major leagues this year could very well be styled the most versatile player awards.

Wartime manpower shortages are causing managers to transplant their players from one position to another and if the spring shuffling is only the beginning, a fan must wonder how his favorite pitcher will do at shortstop in the fall.

The Phillies are doing the most shifting of jobs. Last week they brought Outfielder Jim Wasdell from Pittsburgh and made him their regular first baseman, moving Babe Dahlgren from that spot to shortstop. They have Schoolboy Rowe pinchhitting in almost every game in which he isn't pitching.

Other clubs are doing it too. The New York Yankees moved Pitcher Johnny Lindell to first base and then to the outfield in spring training and the Brooklyn Dodgers switched Billy Herman from second to third.

But one of the prize swaps of the season was made yesterday by Frank Edison Frisch, who installed Catcher Al Lopez at third base for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Lopez has been one of the best backstops in the National league for many years, but his previous experience at the hot corner was limited to about five games in an emergency with the Dodgers a decade ago.

* * *

By putting Lopez on third Frisch was able to give a try at shortstop to Bob Elliott, who only year before last was an outfielder. The result of the newest experiment was that both Lopez and Elliott made an error yesterday and Cincinnati copped the major leagues' first morning game 7-5.

Only one other game was played in the majors yesterday and in this the Dodgers downed the Phillies again 5-3.

TRIES AGAIN

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Veteran Roy Starr will make his third try for victory No. 2 as the Cincinnati Reds face the Pittsburgh Pirates before a ladies' day crowd at Crosley Field this afternoon.

Overnight mound choice of Pittsburgh Manager Frank Frisch is Xavier Rescigno, a graduate of the Pirates' Albany farm club in the Eastern league.

The Reds opened a three-game series with the Pirates yesterday by pounding four Pittsburgh hurlers for 17 hits and a 7 to 5 victory.

BOOK TWIN BILL

CLEVELAND —(AP)—Weather, or more likely the prospect of a slim Monday crowd, caused postponement of the Cleveland Indians' series opener with the Chicago White Sox at League park yesterday.

The deferment enabled the Tribe management to create the first non-scheduled double header of the season Wednesday.

Plan Twilight Track Meet

Lima South High Asks For Meet Next Week.

If arrangements can be made Mansfield high Tyger trackmen will have a twilight meet at Stadium field a week from Friday with Lima South.

Coach Harry Mehock had hoped to book an Akron school for the twilight event, which proved so popular with Mansfield fans a year ago. Yesterday the Lima school asked for a meet here next week and it may be scheduled as a twilight affair.

If South is unable to make the Friday trip, they probably will be booked for Saturday afternoon, Mehock said. This week the Tygers go to the Canton Relays, where Cleveland East Tech will be heavy favorites.

Mehock yesterday mailed out invitations to 19 schools in 10 counties for the district "A" and "B" meet to be held at Stadium field May 22.

Few entries are expected in the "A" meet where the Tygers will be favored, but the "B" division, headed by New London, should draw a respectably entry list.

Counties in the district are: Erie, Sandusky, Crawford, Richland, Huron, Seneca, Ashland, Ottawa, Wyandot, and Hancock.

CARDINALS LOSE TO GREAT LAKES

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—(AP)—The Great Lakes Blue Jackets today boasted a victory over the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, their third triumph in a row.

They defeated the Cards 5-2 before a crowd of 10,000 at the naval training station's Constitution Field, with Sailors Johnny Schmitz and Verne Olsen, for Chicago Cub lefthanders, yielding only a hit apiece in their four-inning assignments.

The Cards' only other hit was a homer by Stan Musial off Tom Ferrick former Cleveland righthander, in the ninth inning. Johnny Mize, former Cardinal and Giant first baseman, led the Bluejackets' 12-hit attack against the Cardinals' George Munger.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Every one of the sports writers who participated in a poll conducted by the North Carolina navy preflight school picked football as one of the ten best sports for physical development . . . The scribes rated track the No. 2 sport with boxing and swimming tied for third.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER.

Jimmy Johnston, reporting on his new bantamweight fighter, Ham Wiloby, modestly claims the boy has possibilities of becoming a greater fighter than three great little men who performed under the Johnston banner, Jim Driscoll, Owen Moran and Johnny Dundee (they're not in position to talk back) . . . "You know," Jimmy confesses, "I've never seen Siloby fight—but what the hell, Shakespeare never saw all the things he wrote about either."

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE.

Frank (Bruiser) Kinard, the football Dodgers all-league tackle, has moved from his Mississippi homestead to take a defense job in Brooklyn. He'll be named the Dodgers line coach as soon as Capt. Dan Topping gets around to making the announcement . . . Clark Griffith recently declined a $1,500 offer for an ad on the big center field signboard in the Washington ball park and then gave the space to the treasury department for a war bond sign. . . . Don Hanski, White Sox rookie pitcher, is a cousin of Eddie Hanyzewski of the Cubs . . . Don shortened his name because he thought it would be more handy to be Hanski.

Alligator In Outfield Scared Nick Out Of Majors

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS —(AP)— A few bits of baseball, basketball, and football picked up from here and there!

Have you ever wondered why Nick (Hipper Dipper) Cullop, new manager of the Columbus Red Birds, never made the big league grade, despite his ability to hit the ball a "country mile" and to field acceptably?

Well, there's just a chance that Nick was frightened out of a major league career—by an alligator.

It was back in 1925, and Nick was trying to cling to the Yankees. He was playing center field in an intra-squad game at St. Petersburg, Fla., when Babe Ruth zoomed a drive over his head. Cullop started after it, and the ball rolled into a swamp which bordered the outfield, with Nick in close pursuit.

Just as he though he had it, Cullop came face to face with an alligator (he insists it was 15 feet long and that it snapped at him.) Nick abandoned the baseball and started for the infield, crossing home plate right on Ruth's heels, although the Babe had something like a quarter-mile start.

Nick refused to go back into the outfield until St. Petersburg had erected a wire fence around the swamp. He failed to stick with the Yanks—maybe because a phantom 'gator followed him into every game with the New Yorkers.

More baseball: Manager Jack (he was Jacques in his playing days) Fournier of the Toledo Mudhens is expecting some more manpower trouble. As his players were placing orders for new bats a few days ago, Fournier turned to trainer Andy Perna and said:

"Better order a couple for yourself, Andy. I'll probably be using you as a pinch-hitter about the Fourth of July."

(Andy has been the Mudhen trainer for more than a decade.)

Baseball—an illustration of how competitive athletics instills fighting spirit into a youngster:

Little Jack Kaveney, one of Springfield Central Catholic's better basketball players, was on the sidelines with an infected foot. Coach Jerry Donohue was worried about the outcome of a game the next night. Jack had been to the physician, and reported to his coach:

"He said I should stay off the foot for a while."

"What about tomorrow night's game?" Donohue asked.

"Oh, he said I could play, if I'd take it easy," Jack replied.

(Can you imagine "taking it easy" in the modern, streamlined type of basketball?)

Football: It seems that all the reams written about Bob Lucas, Paulding high school's junior, bald, Negro backfield star last season, were a bit out of line on one point. Lucas scored 278 points as a junior, and the feat was hailed as an all-time high for a scholastic star.

Now comes word from the Foard county news, from down in Texas, that Dock Todd of Crowell high school counted 318 points in 1934, as a senior. So Lucas' record slips to second place. Todd also scored 664 points in for years—which puts it up to Lucas to count 189 next season for the four-year mark, the Paulding youth having 475 for three campaigns.

How to attend your own "Funeral"

...and like it!

Yes, sir . . . about a week after Pearl Harbor we had more people wringing our hand and consoling us than we ever dreamed we knew.

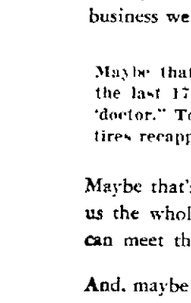
We were "dead." Out of business. The sheriff was on the way.

Well, it may seem strange to you, but we've done okay here. By just staying in the tire business. No porch furniture, or fly swatters, or garden tools. Just tires. Our first love and our last. The business we know. The business we built up originally by earning a reputation as tire experts.

Maybe that's why hundreds of new customers have come to us during the last 17 months, along with our old friends. For advice from a tire "doctor." To bring us their certificates for new Generals or to get their tires recapped by skilled mechanics.

Maybe that's why so many large truck fleet operators, too, have given us the whole responsibility for keeping them on rubber . . . so they can meet the terrific demands of wartime hauling.

And, maybe handling The General Tire had something to do with it. If there ever was a time when people want Top-Quality it is now.



We appreciate deeply your confidence. We hope to continue to merit it and we are looking forward to that great day when you can drive out of here on the Tire of The Future . . . The Top-Quality General to come!

SHELBY SETS UP FUNDS FOR WATER PROJECT

City Will Issue $80,000 In Bonds To Finance Its Share of Cost.

SHELBY—City council at a meeting last night authorized the issuance of $80,000 in mortgage revenue bonds to finance the city's share of improvements planned for the Municipal Water company.

The Federal Works Agency has approved a grant of $96,500 for the balance needed for the project. The work includes construction of a dam over the Blackfork branch of the Mohican river, an upground storage reservoir, a 7,500-foot pipeline to the Parsel air depot and settling basin at the plant.

Council also approved an appraiser's estimate setting the value of 23.35 acres of land owned by Holland Mickey, where the upground storage reservoir is to be built, at $5,100 including damages. Mickey had asked $5,400 for the land.

The city contended that the price was too high so the case was settled by arbitration. L. D. Malone, George Will and John Crum served as appraisers.

A resolution condemning the short line property in the same area owned by Mamie Rogers and Anna Brougher was adopted. Law Director Frank Long was authorized to purchase the land before starting court proceedings.

75,000 PLANES BUILT BY U. S.

Nation Passes 500-a-Month Mark In Output of Heavy Bombers.

1,606,600 deadweight tons. Nelson, in his monthly report for March, said that delivery of Liberty ships for the first time exceeded 100 a month.

Other highlights of Nelson's March production summary:

1. Heavy bomber production passed the 500-a-month mark.

2. Combat vehicles showed a gain of 13 per cent, almost 3,000 tanks being delivered.

3. In the first quarter of 1943, the United States produced almost 18,000 artillery pieces, including more than 7,000 anti-aircraft guns and more than 8,000 anti-tank guns; 235,000 machine guns and more than 1,000,000 rifles and sub-machine guns.

4. The treasury and government corporations spent $7,112,000,000 in March for war purposes, 17 per cent higher than February expenditures.

5. The March index of production stood at 333, a 400 point increase over Pearl Harbor.

Nelson warned, however, that the "Very great advances made in the last year cannot be sustained for many months longer," pointing out that the nation is nearing top capacity in steel production and that "shortages of manpower, particularly of highly trained key personnel, are retarding production."

"There are indications that war production in the next month or two will show substantial gains," he said. "But munitions production for the first quarter of 1943 was only 18 per cent of the output scheduled for the year, indicating that average quarterly output for the succeeding quarters must average 27 per cent of program, or half again as large as in the first quarter, to meet schedules in accordance with military plans."

Yep, Food Problem Even Extends Into Mansfield's Jail

Rationing and increasing food costs caught up with inmates of the city jail today.

Asserting that she was unable to continue providing meals for the city prisoners at the existing rate, Mrs. Eddie McNew discontinued serving the jail inmates who were moved to the county jail until other arrangements can be made.

Mrs. McNew took charge of the serving after her husband went into the navy. Meals were taken to the jail three times a day after they were prepared elsewhere.

Mrs. McNew received 40 cents a day per inmate and said yesterday that she could not continue the meal service at that figure. Police agreed that the amount was too low.

Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff has asked for bids on a new contract when will be let May 10 unless rising food costs scare bidders away.

GALION TURNS DOWN NURSERY SCHOOL PLAN

Committee Decides No Need at Present For Second Project.

GALION — Because of insufficient interest on the part of parents there will be no immediate establishment of a second nursery school in Galion, it was decided at the meeting held Monday evening in the office of Supt. M. A. Povenmire of the Galion public schools.

The meeting had been called for the purpose of discussing the proposed project for which the federal government had allocated Galion schools $9,505. Since the Lanham act funds for such nursery schools are provided on a 50-50 basis, that the community pay half of the support of the school, it is felt that the setting-up of a second nursery school at this time would not pay.

The one school, now in operation at East building, will be continued, Supt. Provenmire said today. He also stated that last night's decision is not final on the matter of a second school and that reconsideration of the project will be made when the need is shown.

He said there will be the necessity for care of school-age children of war-working mothers during the summer months. Government aid for this project has been provided.

At last night's meeting, a brief review of the present Nursery school at the East building since 1934 was given by the supervisor, Mrs. Sara Beegle.

SAILORS ATTEND ROTARY MEETING

NEW LONDON — The expression "The fleet's in," could very well have applied at the weekly luncheon of the New London Rotary club Monday when Seamen Max Richards, Bill Gilbert and Dick Wolfe all from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, attended the luncheon. Each man was accompanied by his father, and as a program feature, each gave a talk on some phase of navy life.

All three boys are talented musicians and are part of the famous Great Lakes Naval Training Drum and Bugle corps. Each is taking a different phase of work and spoke on their activities. Richards spoke on the navy cuisine or "chow," Wolf on the physical side of navy life, and Gilbert chose a general overall picture of navy life, dwelling briefly on the musical end of navy routine.

SITE DONATED

Property For Home For Aged Given To Ashland Group.

ASHLAND—Ashland was one step nearer having an old ladies' home for which funds were left 12 years ago by the late Julia McConnell.

Mrs. Guy C. Myers of Ashland, has made a gift of 3.9 acres of land at the south end of Broad street for a site for the proposed home.

The gift has been accepted by the Old Ladies' Home board, an organization set up to administer the $25,000 bequest left in the McConnell will. The sum which now totals $30,000 due to income from investment of the funds, was bequeathed to assist in building an old ladies' home in Ashland.

The board has started plans to draft the deed, landscape the grounds and draft the home building plans with the idea of being prepared to begin work as soon as the war ends.

The fleeing car rolled on for five miles after bullets flattened one tire and punctured the gasoline tank, setting it ablaze, the state police said. The fugitive was identified as Edward Lewarski, 25.

Close Conference With Plea To Spread Rotary Principles

introduced by retiring District Governor Julius E. Bohn.

At the afternoon session at the Majestic theater, Philip R. Adams, director of the Gallery of Fine Arts, Columbus, and student of South American affairs, spoke on "The Latin-American Scene," and gave a close-up picture of some of the historic misunderstandings that have slowed application of the good neighbor policy between the United States and South American countries.

"We have been slow to understand," he said, "that careful preparation is needed to establish friendly relations with Latin countries, and well-intentioned Hollywood movies have tended to widen rather than narrow the breach."

Germany's shrewder methods, he explained, were more effective in developing friendships and trade, and gave the impression that fascism was the only important doctrine in the outside world.

Fred Hopkins, Fostoria publisher and past district governor, gave a talk on youth problems in wartime, mentioning the increase in juvenile delinquency and telling of methods employed in some cities to provide leisure time entertainment for school children. He emphasized the opportunity of Rotary clubs to take the initiative in similar activities in their communities.

An impressive memorial service for the 27 Rotarians in the district whose death occurred during the past year was conducted by the Wooster club, with Rev. John Williams as narrator and other members of the club assisting.

A salute to Rotarians in military service was given by Ben Heinman of the Elyria club, who was introduced by William B. Kellogg, president of the Ashland club.

The attendance plaque, for greatest distance covered by members in reaching the conference, was awarded to Van Wert, with 11 members present.

Concluding the afternoon session, incoming presidents and secretaries met with District Governor Nominee Waddle for discussion of the district program of activities for next year.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the hotel ballroom, Harry Poulston, of Lima, past district governor and director of Rotary International, described the hardships which clubs are overcoming in order to continue operating in war-torn Europe.

Addressing more than 200 members and delegates, Poulston likened the clubs to the outposts on the frontiers of early America.

"Rotary has its outposts today in Europe," he said, "In the midst of blood there is a patch of light. In the midst of death itself Rotary lives, loves and breathes."

He cited activities of clubs in England, Switzerland, Iceland, Finland, India, China and Australia, pointing out that the various units had rendered exceptional services for members and their families in Axis-occupied countries.

In Australia, he said, Rotarians have taken U. S. soldiers stationed in that country into their homes and feted them.

"They have taken them into their homes before they turn their faces to God knows what," he declared.

Poulston was introduced by District Governor Julius E. Bohn of Ashland.

Capt. Lawrence Mills of the army procurement office in Cleveland, in an informal talk concerning the problems faced by the army in procuring officer material described the nation's armed forces as a "modern miracle."

He referred particularly to the rapid growth and the training given men in the army.

Capt. Mills said that 70 out of every 100 men in the nation's armed forces today are trained specialists.

The procurement service, he said, is in need of men with professional experience. He outlined the qualifications necessary to obtain a commission in the supply service and told of the war department rigid specifications set up for applicants.

O. H. Schaaf, president of the Shelby club presided. Invocation was given by Rev. A. J. E. Manton, member of the Bucyrus club. Dinner music was furnished by Eugene Weinberger.

The Leiderkranz Women's chorus, under the direction of Frank Gfrer will sing "Munterbach" by S. Rodenberg and "Giannina Mia" by Friml. "Last Uns Wie Bruender" by Becker and "Old Black Joe" by Foster are the two selections the Leiderkranz male chorus will sing.

The mixed chorus will sing "Zich Mitt" by Gottfried Angerer. All three of the choruses are directed by Gfrer.

Song leader for the evening will be Charles Conklin with George Ireland at the piano.

A part of the national program for music week celebration is the presentation of Eunice Lee Kettering's prize-winning choral composition "Johnny Appleseed" tonight from 11:30 to midnight over a national network. Music lovers in Mansfield and this vicinity are planning late listening parties to hear the world premiere of the Ashland composer's work.

OHIOANS SMOKE MORE CIGARETS

COLUMBUS (UP) — Ohioans smoked 1,727,000 more cigarets every day during April than they did in April, 1942, and at that rate the state will conclude the year with $1,000,000 more than it counted on in tax revenue, a check of cigaret tax records disclosed today.

The increased cigaret smoking boosted the state's income from the two-cent-a-pack tax to $3,303,675 for the first four months of 1943, an increase of $168,896 over revenue for corresponding months of last year.

W. D. Bailey, chief of the cigaret tax division, said he believed Ohioans are smoking more because of the war and because of the shift in population from rural to urban areas.

WORLD COUNCIL DRIVE PLANNED

Leaders To Ring Middle West Door Bells To Promote 'Order By Force.'

(By International News Service)

CHICAGO — A campaign throughout the midwest to fight "isolationism" and to arouse sentiment for a council of nations to "maintain order by force if necessary" was in the making today following a one-day conference of the newly formed Republican Post-war Policy association.

Chairman Deneen Watson announced the campaign at the close of the conference which was highlighted by a speech by Congressman Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois before advocates of postwar collaboration of nations from 12 midwestern states.

Watson said a "hard-hitting, door bell precinct drive," would be launched at once. Speakers, he said, will "go to the people and seek votes and demand that the leaders pledge themselves to a program on which to build a lasting peace." He added:

"We're in a hard fight in the middle west. The prophets of isolation still are preaching. Here will be the great decision for the nation."

He asserted that the organization is "committed to no presidential candidate."

Urging that postwar planning be done under the direction of congress rather than control of the White House, Rep. Dirksen made a vigorous plea for a program which would set up machinery "for making peace and finally the machinery and method for preserving peace." He said:

"It is plain as print that no peace will last unless we join with other nations in making it last."

YANKS PURSUE NAZIS TOWARD BIZERTE BASE

Big Guns Pound Ferryville, 10 Miles From Coast's Key Fortress.

on the east coast, with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery signalling the offensive as usual by a violent artillery barrage.)

The communique issued from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters described the American and French advances as covering "many miles," and said the enemy had been forced to "evacuate all his forward positions" in the north after "10 days of relentless pressure and much heavy fighting."

The two drives of the Americans and the third thrust by the French and Americans along the Mediterranean coast left some enemy troops stranded in their mountain strongholds in the Jefna area west of Mateur and an extensive roundup of prisoners was continuing.

Several hundred already had been captured.

While the ground forces were smashing through the crags of northern Tunisia — forcing the Germans to retire to new mountainous strongpoints and threatening the isolation of Bizerte— the strategic air force smashed at port installations in Bizerte yesterday, scoring direct hits, it was asserted.

An airfield was the target for medium bombers that laid their missiles among Axis aircraft nested on the ground, and fighter-bombers started fires on jetties along the Tunisian coast, while fighter planes patrolled and strafed the battle area in offensive sweeps throughout the day, headquarters said.

The Allied air force lost a total of eight planes in the operations, it was announced.

A spectacular victory by American troops won Mateur after they had taken German mountain strongholds guarding its path, forcing the Germans to fall east of that Tunisian crossroads city.

Protests U. S. Action Against Martinique

NEW YORK — (AP) — Admiral Georges Robert, French high commissioner of Martinique, has protested the action of the U. S. state department in breaking off relations with his administration because of its close connection with the German-dominated Vichy government, he disclosed last night.

In a cable to the Associated Press, Admiral Robert said the state department's action "offers nothing else in exchange" for the ruptured relations, and has "shut out all possibility of a fresh proposal on my part" by calling home the U. S. consul general.

Robert urged the text of his reply to the state department be made public in American newspapers, but failed to disclose what steps he proposed to take in the face of the department's action.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull's note to Robert on April 26 said the Vichy regime "is now an integral part of the Nazi system" and declared that "the French islands in the Caribbean are the only French territories physically free from Axis domination which have no part in the struggle for French liberation and which professes allegiance to a regime under the direct control of Germany."

Hull's note repudiated "any informal understanding with respect to the French Antilles based upon past discussions and conditions."

Polish-Soviet Break Blamed On Nazis

LONDON — (AP) — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, in a statement to the house of commons on Polish-Russian relations, condemned today "the cynicism which permits the Nazi murderers of hundreds of thousands of innocent Poles and Russians to make use of a story of mass murder to disturb the unity of the Allies."

The British government, Eden declared, used its influence from the outset in an effort to persuade the Poles and the Russians not to allow the German maneuvers any success.

The government, he added, blamed no one "except the common enemy" for the dispute arising from a Polish demand for a Red Cross investigation of German charges that the Russians murdered 10,000 Polish officers near Smolensk prior to the Russian-German war.

Eden said the British government's sole desire was to heal the breach between Moscow and the Polish government-in-exile here "as swiftly as possible."

Reports Nazi Battle Fleet On Move

LONDON — (U.P.) — Reports from Sweden said today that Germany's main battle fleet has sailed northward from Trondheim, Norway, for an all-out attempt to cut the Allies northern supply route to Russia.

The move was said to be designed also to draw off additional heavy British naval units at a time when they are needed to protect convoys moving reinforcements of men and material from the United States to England and Africa for impending invasions of western and southern Europe.

At the same time, Swedish reports said, U.S. equipment of battleships, cruisers and destroyers is up to the task of stemming the flow of supplies to Russia has released scores of torpedo bombers from northern Norway, where they have been carrying the main brunt of the convoy attacks, for transfer to Sicily to help guard against any Allied invasion.

Kuban Delta Battle Now In Full Swing

MOSCOW — (AP) — The battle for the Kuban delta, an area reaching roughly from Novorossisk on the Black sea northward to the Sea of Azov, is in full swing and it is not unlikely this is the beginning of the great struggle of the summer.

Both sides apparently fought behind strong fortifications and managed to hold their ground positions without change in the last few days, but a Tass dispatch from the Kuban told of another gigantic air battle west of Krasnodar, with the Soviet airmen shooting down 54 German planes while losing 21 of their own in two days.

was the equivalent of a 25 per cent increase in the numerical strength of the fleet and its auxiliaries based on figures of Jan. 1, 1943," Knox said.

While the secretary stated that the nation's naval shipyards and navy aircraft plants now have reached peak construction he warned that labor shortages and lack of critical materials could cut production in the future.

It was recalled that Knox in March gave a report on record construction for the month of February.

During February, he said that 130 new combat vessels were built, 20 others were converted and 100 large landing boats were constructed.

During February, 1,400 new planes of all types were accepted by the navy, approximately half of which were combat aircraft.

Nazis Say Yanks Practice 'Terror Raids' In Brooklyn.

(By United Press)

The Berlin radio charged today that American fliers become proficient at "terror raids" by shooting up Brooklyn back home. The discovery was reported in a broadcast heard by the federal communications commission.

The Berlin propagandists said they had proof that machine-gunners "shot off the roofs of apartment houses" in Brooklyn.

They obviously referred to the accidental discharge of an anti-aircraft gun following Sunday's practice air raid alert in New York.

Try to Explain Drop In Sinkings

STOCKHOLM — (AP) — Berlin dispatches to Swedish newspapers offered a variety of explanations today for the admitted drop in ship sinkings by U-boats last month, one being that the Allies may be getting ready to invade Europe.

The German newspaper Borsenzeitung was quoted as saying that there were fewer convoys to shoot at in April. The paper recalled that the number of convoys dropped just before the North African landings last November and suggested that the Allies might now be collecting ships for another invasion.

ICKES ORDERS SIX-DAY WEEK IN COAL PITS

Tells Operators To Pay Time and Half For Extra Day; Lewis Stands Pat.

upon you and all miner employes to exercise utmost effort in maintaining and increasing production of coal so vital to the winning of the war.

"If for any justifiable physical or operating reason a six-day week basis is not feasible, timely application for exemption from this directive may be made together with full supporting statement with underlying reasons.

"I intend to recommend to the office of price administration that the increase in maximum prices for six-day week operation be rescinded as to any mine which fails to comply with this directive."

But the issue of who will handle permanent settlement of the wage dispute which brought the week-end walkout found both sides still standing pat.

The war labor board was confident President Roosevelt fully supported its jurisdiction, and that the case will be handled without any deviation from the normal wartime procedure.

And John L. Lewis asserted the United Mine Workers, whom he ordered back to work today pending further negotiations, did not retreat when they agreed to the 15-day armistice—that they still refused to refer the case to the WLB.

The next step, he said in New York, is up to Fuel Administrator Harold L. Ickes, the appointed boss of the government-controlled coal fields.

Members of the board, on the other hand, expressed confidence in their position after at least one of them conferred with Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, and several of the public members flatly implied that they would resign if they lost control of the case.

In a statement issued after a meeting of the union's policy committee, Lewis repeated recent assertions that the miners are "no longer bound by the no-strike pledge," and that, by adopting the little steel wage formula, the WLB had "breached the understanding" between labor, employers, the public and the administration regarding wartime strikes.

Lewis also said "the war labor board must accept the full responsibility" for the situation which he charged to "distress in the ranks of labor" —apparently replying to President Roosevelt's Sunday night speech in which he blamed the walkout of nearly half a million miners on the national union officials. He added the miners would stand pat on their original demands for a $2-a-day wage increases, portal-to-portal pay and unionization of minor bosses.

Since there was no statement from Ickes concerning his Sunday conference with Lewis, the capital speculates whether the latter had obtained some concession from the government and bypassed the WLB. But none of the following available information seemed to indicate such a possibility:

President Roosevelt said in his Sunday night speech: "The first necessity is the resumption of coal mining. The terms of the old contract will be followed by the secretary of the interior (Ickes). If an adjustment in wages results from a decision of the war labor board or from any new agreement between the operators and the miners, which is approved by the war labor board, that adjustment will be made retroactive to April 1."

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early, commenting on the fact that Mr. Roosevelt made no reference to the 15-day strike truce, said the speech contained: "Not a word or statement that does not hold equally true two days from now, two weeks from now, two months from now or two years from now."

An authoritative government source who declined to be further identified said Secretary Ickes has "no power and no desire" to negotiate a contract, that his job is to get out the coal and that he is interested in a contract only insofar as the executive order directed him to restore the mines to the operators "as soon as he determines that possession and operation hereunder are no longer required for the furtherance of the war program." However, Labor Secretary Perkins said Ickes would confer with union leaders and operators and try to bring them together.

War labor board members said the three-man, fact-finding panel would resume hearings as soon as normal coal production was resumed. The hearings were not terminated last week but were suspended in accordance with board policy not to consider the merits of a case while production is interrupted.

The secretary of labor said no concessions or promises had been given Lewis — even concerning procedure.

Thus, the developments seemed to support the WLB stand that it will decide the dispute or will pass upon an agreement which adjusts wages.

Ohio Pits to Reach Full Output Today

BELLAIRE — (AP) — Ohio's coal pits were expected to reach full production again today as a mining work stoppage ended officially throughout the nation.

Most eastern Ohio shafts resumed operations yesterday and southern Ohio diggers returned today under a 15-day truce agreed to by the United Mine Workers and the federal government which took over the mines last week.

The miners, again streaming into the shafts in regular shifts, said they were pleased that the stoppage which began last Friday night was over and expressed confidence they would obtain higher pay.

Virtually full shifts reported in eastern Ohio yesterday afternoon, but resumption of operations was delayed in the Hocking valley to permit completion of repairs begun in the mines during the work holiday.

Adolph Pacifico, UMW vice president for Disthict 6, which includes Ohio and part of West Virginia, said every man would report today and only inability to notify all miners of the return-to-work order prevented a nearly complete turnout yesterday.

Drowned 7 Weeks Ago, Girl's Body Found By Farmer

bank of the creek, swollen by the spring thaw. She lost her footing and fell in, disappearing in the swift-moving water before neighbors who saw the accident could come to her rescue. Search parties were formed and banks of the stream combed for the body without success. It was the belief of authorities on finding the body yesterday that the spring rains had dislodged the body from some other point carrying it to the Keller farm where it was found.

Realizing when he saw the body that it must be that of the little Kemle girl, Keller called Coroner D. A. Kachley of Galion. The body was removed from the creek bed to the Beck funeral home in Crestline.

Private funeral service will be conducted there today with Rev. Charles Lang, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church in charke. Burial will be in Greenlawn cemetery.

The child is survived by her parents and seven brothers and sisters.

'BUNA TIRES'

Few Will Be Released To B and C Card Holders.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Rubber Director William M. Jeffers, today announced that "a small number" of tires and tubes made of Buna-S synthetic rubber will be available to B and C gasoline ration card holders this month or next.

He announced that the synthetic tires and tubes were produced during the current experimental period and will be released through regular rationing channels.

The Truman committee meanwhile called Jeffers to defend himself against charge that his too vigorous prosecution of the synthetic rubber program resulted in a shortage of gasoline for military planes and slowed down the production of navy vessels.

WAR EFFORT GETS BONUS

GOP CONFIDENT RUML TAX PLAN TO BE PASSED

Decks Cleared For Action on Once-Defeated Bill Fixing Year's Forgiveness.

(INS Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — The house cleared its decks today for another vote on the Ruml-Carlson tax plan, with GOP leaders confidently predicting adoption of the controversial pay-as-you-go measure before night.

Rejected only five weeks ago by a 215-198 vote, the measure, according to Republican chieftains, has gained new adherents, chiefly among the GOP members who broke ranks at that time to oppose it.

"We have regained enough support on our side of the aisle to make victory certain if the 17 Democrats who backed the Ruml-Carlson bill before, do so again," said House Republican Leader Joseph Martin, jr.

"It looks like we'll win."

The measure will be offered as a substitute for an administration-sponsored bill by Chairman Doughton (D) N. C., of the ways and means committee, which would abate only 44 per cent of the 1942 tax liability compared to the 100 per cent cancellation feature of the Ruml plan.

Not out of the picture by any means is a compromise between the two plans, sponsored jointly by Reps. Robertson (D) Va., and Forand (D) R. I., which would cancel 70 per cent of the 1942 tax burden, with the bulk of the abatement accruing to taxpayers in the lower brackets.

Indications were that if the Republicans can not put over the Ruml-Carlson bill, they may swing to the Forand-Robertson proposal which has strong Democratic support. Fate of the administration-backed Doughton bill appeared in doubt although Democratic leaders have worked furiously trying to line up support for it.

Although not all 17 Democrats who backed the Ruml plan in March could be reached today, the prospects were that approximately 14 of them would again vote for it.

Republican leaders claim that 15 of the 24 Republicans who voted against the Ruml-Carlson bill in March, have changed their minds and will support it. To them, this shift spells victory.

Hamilton Prepares for Post-War Construction Program.

HAMILTON — (AP) — A post-war plan of construction, expansion and improvement, calling for estimated expenditures of $6,857,930, was announced today by City Manager R. P. Price. Price said the major project is the construction of a sewage disposal plant costing $1,423,000.

How to Make Cooking Fats Do Double Duty!

OF COURSE YOU CAN! There's no conflict between rationing and saving your used cooking grease to make gunpowder for our men at the front. And the reasons are very simple. First, the government doesn't ask for your fats until you've got all the cooking good out of them. And, second, even if you consume a lot of them in using them over, what you have left is vitally important. No housewife need think she has too little to turn in! Because just one simple tablespoon of used fat will make five machine gun bullets. Save every precious drop. Keep it in a can. When full, rush it to your meat dealer.

MINER'S WIFE LOOKS FORWARD TO PRICE CUTS

Kitchen Costs Form Her Big Problem In Midst of Current Coal Crisis.

By JANE COCHRAN
(INS Staff Correspondent)

LIBRARY, Pa. — The miner's wife—the woman with her hands firmly clenched on the family's purse strings—looked to the president's promise to pull down soaring costs of living today with new hope.

Faced with a meat, potato and vegetable budget that's "almost doubled within a year," the wives of this sprawling, hilly coal community of 750 miners and their families looked at the complicated coal crisis today from one viewpoint—their kitchen costs.

Plump, amiable Mrs. Vic Siciliano sat in the kitchen of her five-room company house "on the hill" and shook her head.

"It used to cost me $22 to $23 to feed my family of five every two weeks last year. We ate well," she said. "Now there's four of us and I spend $40 to $45 and we don't eat as well."

Gray-haired, wan Mrs. Tom Evans, who feeds a family of six in her drab frame house down the rough street from Mrs. Siciliano, declares her living costs have "almost doubled" in the year. "and every other wife on the hill here will tell you the same."

"I bought a ham last Easter," she said, "it cost $3.80. I bought one this year—the same size. It cost $7.55. We're big meat eaters."

Mrs. Steve Dudokovich, who has nine living in her four-room house near Mrs. Evans, flatly states that there's little left after the food and clothes bills are paid.

"We've got three working and I can't keep ahead," she said. "I don't know what I'm going to do when my two sons go into the army—and they're going soon. It costs us $70 to eat every two weeks and it used to cost $35. The men are getting more money now than they ever got—with overtime—but the way I'm spending it—and I try to be careful. My old man has a fit about the bill."

"Everybody tells us we ought to be patriotic and work," Mrs. Dudukovich continued. "We want to work—a strike is tough on us—but we just can't pay the prices we've been paying on what our men are getting."

Mrs. Ed Smith, who lives in an identical house in the cheerless cluster of company-owned homes has an identical story.

"Steak was 45 cents last year, it's 55 cents now," she said. "There's the same story with the cheaper cuts. They aren't cheap now. We use a lot of eggs. We paid 28 and 29 cents last year, we pay 48 and 50 cents now. Butter is high and vegetables—I just can't look at them, even. I used to get a huge head of cauliflower for 19 cents last year. Do you know what they asked me last week for a head? Forty cents! Onions I used to bring home in a big bag. Now I only get a couple of pounds for the same money."

Miners' lunches play a major part in a housewife's life in a coal community and they take a lot of bread.

"I used 25 pounds of flour a week—that makes 14 loaves of bread," Mrs. Smith said. "A 100 pound sack of flour used to be $2.98. Now it's $4.40."

Rent is a minor part of the budget of the families in this community. Their houses are drab and they're overcrowded as a rule, but rent is from $10 to $12 a month.

The women of Library look at the coal controversy from their post at the kitchen stove and they and the men they feed—and boss—are convinced that the miners have a better break due them.

The origin of the name Uncle Sam is unknown: it was being used about the time of the outbreak of the War of 1812.

GERMANS PLANT MINES, LEAVE DEAD UNBURIED

Hasty Flights Make Task of Interment Impossible as Allies Rush Forward.

By HAROLD V. BOYLE

WITH THE AEF IN TUNISIA —(Delayed)—(AP)—German engineers, constantly retreating these days, sow the land with mines as if with wheat to try to stay the Allied envelopmnet as long as possible. Nazis now leave their dead unburied. Two months ago they interred their slain in neat, rock-bordered, flower-decked graves. Now they lie in grotesque postures on the battlefield, waiting on a charitable foe to put their bodies into the earth they claimed but could not hold.

The approaching end of this campaign can be seen in the eagerness of the toughened Allied troops to close with the elusive Germans. They want to smash and smash until the long march in North Africa is over. They know that their victory is inevitable whether it takes a week or a month or two months but they want it quickly.

One staff officer remarked a little wryly:

"At least we feel now that the Tunisian campaign won't be our life work."

Big, heavy command cars are very popular vehicles now and for a good reason. They aren't as handy as jeeps but they afford much more protection in case they strike one of the powerful teller mines left abundantly behind by the fleeing Germans.

The road mines contain eleven pounds of explosive, enough to blow off the front end of a command car but giving the occupants a better than even chance of getting out with their lives. The same mine will hurl a jeep 15 or 20 feet. Many jeep riders pack sand bags on the dashboard to weight the little cars and protect them from mine fragments.

"It used to be you saw nobody but generals and colonels in those command cars," said a military policeman. "Now the second lieutenants crowd them like street cars."

The most colorful troops along the American second corps sector from Beja north to the Mediterranean are the Goums, native troops from the Atlas mountains in Morocco, and the volunteer soldiers of the Corps Franc d'Afrique.

There are a hundred good stories about the Goums, simple, bronze-faced warriors who ate among the world's best hill fighters. Their French officers love to tell them.

For example there was the Goum sentry who halted all who approached with the words "If you do not say 'mirabeau' I will not let you in."

The Goums are inclined to rate a man's wealth by the number of clothes he has on. Their spirits and their fortunes rise whenever they take prisoners. One Goum wearing one French and one Italian shoe, two German shirts and his bathrobed-striped djellaba capped his weird costume by putting over it a blue Italian overcoat so tight he could hardly budge his arms pleased as a child he ran to his officer and strutted proudly.

"Gee, lieutenant," he said, 'don't I look swell."

TELLS OF LIFE IN NAZI CAMP

Former German Prisoner Says Newspaper Stories Not Exaggerated.

(By International News Service)

SALT LAKE CITY — Having suffered the brutalities of the Nazis for six weeks as a prisoner in the winter of 1938, Private Fred Baer, now stationed at the Salt Lake army air base, declared that "Newspaper items about Nazi concentration camps aren't exaggerated a bit. In fact, they aren't enlarged enough."

The stories related by Private Baer about his six-weeks internment are anything but nice.

"We had no water to drink, nor any in which to wash. And when I returned home upon release and had my first bath, three changes of water were necessary before I was clean," he said.

"Let me give you an example of what we, as Nazi prisoners, had to eat. For breakfast we were allowed one-third of a loaf of hard bread, sometimes with molasses but most of the time without, and a liquid erroneously called coffee.

"At the noon meal, which came anywhere from 11 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon, we were given a bowl of soup -- nothing more. At night, our menu consisted of the remains of the morning's bread with either cheese, sausage or stale herring, and more 'coffee.' Prisoners frequently died of diabetes."

A wood structure about 75 yards long heated by one stove, housed 1,000 prisoners at night and many succumbed to colds and pneumonia, he said, as the temperature dropped as low as 35 degrees below zero.

"Most of us had no protection against the cold, while some were given one thin blanket," Baer declared.

"Work consisted principally of carrying bricks and stones with older prisoners engaged in building roads. Red flags marked the territory in which we were to remain, and if a prisoner crossed the line he was shot by guards armed with machine guns.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, MAY 4, 1943.

There is no problem in America today that can't be solved—and beaten. Yes, that includes food production, manpower needs, ships, airplanes, everything. I am convinced that America will win that post-war battle as surely as it will win today's war. And those victories, together, will start the biggest realm of prosperity and happiness this world has ever known.—Henry J. Kaiser.

Danger In Minority Coercion

THERE are two basic facts about such labor strife as has lately interrupted domestic peace and threatened the safety of this nation.

The first is the domestic danger that comes from forcing up wages arbitrarily, instead of holding them even by sound economic policy. Such procedure starts a movement in which prices and wages may spiral up together, each trying to keep on top, until the contagion spreads, money standards are wrecked and millions of people are ruined.

The second danger is closely allied with the first. It is the placing of great powers in the hands of men, whether capital or labor, who acknowledge no public responsibility and no allegiance to the government, but plunge ahead recklessly with their own policies.

These are times when government, labor and private enterprise all have to stand together, lest they all fall together.

It can be said that, in these recent domestic struggles, government and capital have been acting quite fairly on the whole. The economic boat-rocking has been done by labor representatives. Not by all, nor even by a majority, but by minority groups, who would recklessly pull down the economic structure over their own heads if given their own way.

Doubtless there are wage inequities to be remedied, but it should be accomplished by legitimate procedure, not by arbitrary compulsion.

Foundations for Two Freedoms

UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE SUMNER WELLES, in urging that agreements based on the principles of the Atlantic Charter be reached by the United Nations before an armistice is signed, so that among other things rehabilitation measures can be undertaken without delay, opens a subject on the successful solution of which the future well-being and prosperity of this country and the world, depends.

"Freedom from fear—the assurance of peace," says Mr. Welles, "and freedom from want—the assurance of individual personal security, require all the implementations which the genius of man can devise through effective forms of international co-operation."

Peace—freedom from fear—cannot be assured while war threatens anywhere throughout the globe—and until nations jointly exercise police powers to prevent armed hostilities.

Freedom from want, Mr. Welles points out, depends upon people being able to find useful work continuously and to exchange the things they produce for things other people can make.

The problem of removing obstacles to fair exchange is more difficult than the problem of production. "It will take much wisdom, much co-operative effort, and much surrender of private, short-sighted and sectional self interest, to make these things all come true. But the goal is freedom from want, individual security and national prosperity."

As one of the first steps in carrying out such a program, the world will be watching to see whether congress takes favorable action on renewal of the reciprocal trade agreements act, next June.

Migratory Workers Create Problems

SHIFTING workers from one state to another, to equalize labor shortages and surpluses, is among war emergency measures which can scarcely fail to bring serious post-war relief problems not unlike one that harried Mansfield for many years following a local importation of laborers to meet temporary needs of one industry.

Present "importation," on a voluntary basis, is largely from southern states to meet northern industrial needs, and post-war readjustments will probably not be easy.

The idea of "importing" and "exporting" both commodities and men, among the states, though not a new practice, is a rather strange term. The United States always used to be thought of collectively with regard to trade, labor migration, and so on. But latterly there seems to be a growing tendency to consider the state the basic unit in such matters, and restrict freedom of traffic both commercial and human.

Inventor of the Ice Cream Cone

THE WORLD too often does not know the names of its greatest benefactors. This is certainly the case with Ernest A. Hamwi of St. Louis, who has just died at 59, and who brought happiness to more people than almost anyone that can be thought of.

Hamwi invented the ice-cream cone. The Chicago World's Fair of 1893 had a lasting effect on American architecture, but the St. Louis Exposition of 1904 gave the world this great delicacy. Observing the popularity of two near-by concessions, an ice-cream parlor and a waffle stand, Hamwi had the brilliant idea of combining the two. Hence evolved the ice-cream cone, and daily joy in the hearts of countless youngsters.

Hamwi is dead, but his work goes on, interrupted, it is to be hoped only temporarily, by the war.

Parade Worth Waiting For

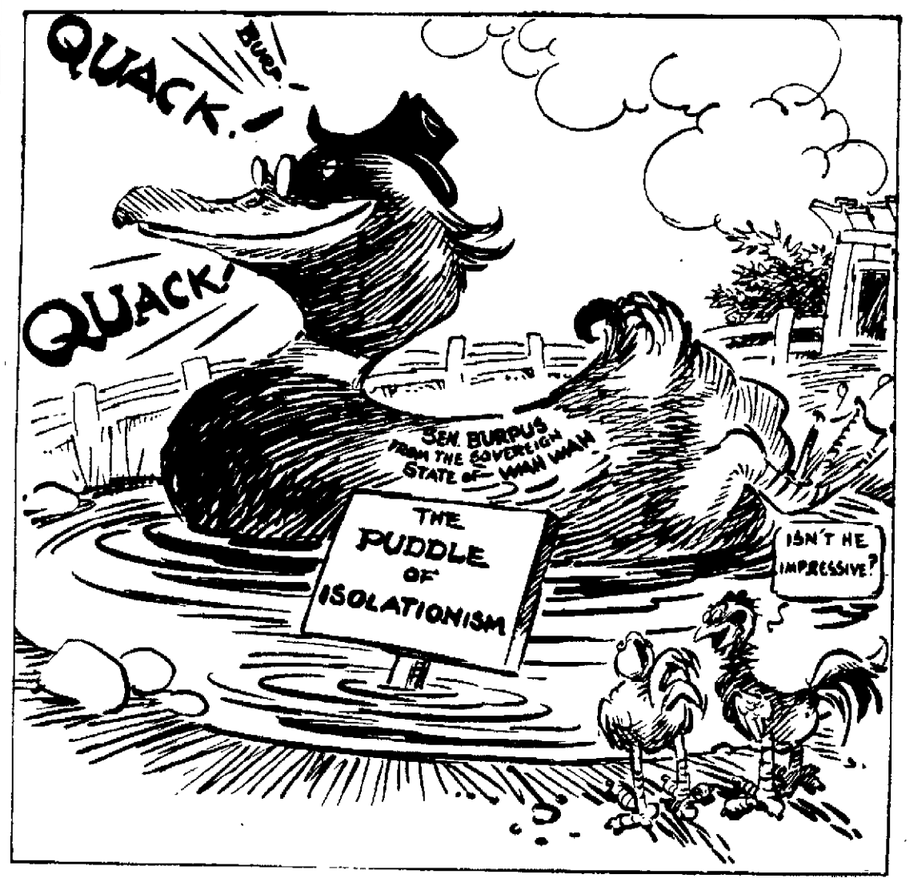
ANCIENT ROMANS used to celebrate a victory beyond the common by holding a "triumph." This was a huge procession of conqueror and conquered, with floats of the captives and strange animals of the beaten country. Out of this, it has been suggested, may have arisen the circus parade.

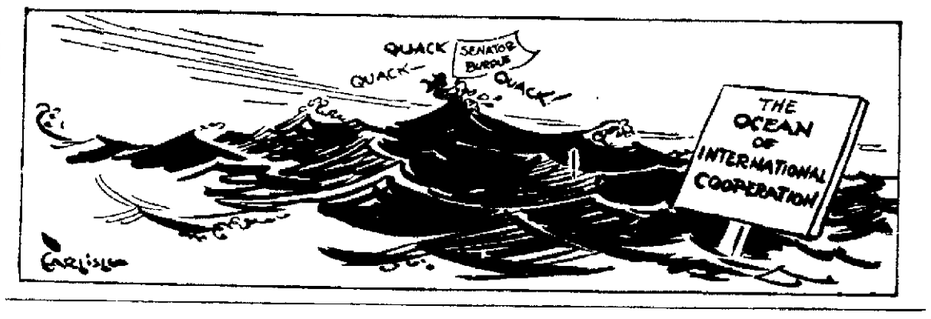
Parades are always popular. People wait for hours to watch them go by. But no parade could be more popular, with people willing to wait indefinitely for it, than the great triumphal procession celebrating victory over Hitler, Mussolini, Tojo and their supporters.

An English travel item says: "Sleeping cars are few and far between"—separated by freight cars, perhaps.

Cheer up! There may be less gas next winter, but more anti-freeze mixture is promised.

SOME DUCKS PREFER SMALL PUDDLES





White Light on the Black Market

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Congressmen and government officials are convinced that the lid will blow off the black market story any minute now.

It probably will come as soon as congress is comfortably settled after the Easter "vacation" and has had an opportunity to commune with itself on whether conditions are as bad throughout the rest of the United States as they are in Washington.

Meatleggers, javaleggers, gasleggers, spudleggers and the rest are almost as common here as bootlegers were in any metropolitan center in the prohibition era.

My own simple investigations here have disclosed:

(1) A congressman was approached by a furtive stranger in the halls of his apartment building and offered one pound of coffee for $1.25. I could use names and places except that the congressman bought it, established connections with this javaleggar and has turned in his name to OPA investigators.

(2) A former well-to do produce man is keeping office hours only in the mornings and driving a taxi in the afternoons and evenings. (Out of the latter he makes about $250 a month.) "It was either get into the black market game or get out of business," he said, "and I have two boys in the army." He told of one of his customers, owner of three groceries, who was screaming for white potatoes.

When the produce dealer told him he couldn't get potatoes at any price, the groceryman said, all right, he would go to the black market. "I can get all I want there and I've got hundreds of customers who will buy them at five pounds for $1."

(For a month Washington has received only one-fifth its normal needs of white potatoes, receipts averaging only one car a day.)

(3) That the liquor black market has become so serious that Rep. Andrew J. May, of Kentucky, demanded the OPA crack down. The OPA has promised to do so, but off the record, some officials assert there isn't manpower enough in the investigation division to pay attention to the small-time black market operators.

Because that condition exists in other products, as well as in liquor, the small-time black market is flourishing unpunished throughout the country as well as in the District of Columbia.

(4) That one out of every five auto drivers has little black market books with the names and telephone numbers of gasleggers. The telephone numbers are not used to call for deliveries, as in the days of bootlegging, but to find out if the dealers have any gas on hand before wasting what is in the tank by making the run to the filling station or garage where it is sold.

(5) That the black market in meat, for a time the most flourishing of all, has struck a snag in spoilage. So many butchers have been stung, and so many consumers have been caught the same way or made ill by overripe and uninspected meats, that both public and dealers are beginning to shy away.

Just why the white light of publicity has not been turned on black market operations in this country to a greater extent is a mystery. It's true that responsible officials are reluctant to advertise their inability to cope with the situation, but it also is true that if the public were really aroused to the magnitude of this "flagrant and inexcusable violation of the anti-inflation program," as Mr. May calls it, we might move a long way toward stamping it out.

Timely Editorial

64,500 Americans Killed.

The National Safety Council makes a shocking comparison showing that five times as many American lives have been lost since Pearl Harbor in accidents on the industrial front as in battle.

The figures are respectively 64,500 and 12,123.

Most battle casualties must be considered unavoidable. What makes the comparison shocking is that practically all industrial casualties could be prevented.

This senseless loss of life and the thousands more of major and minor injuries suffered constitute a serious war setback, not unlike a great defeat. Emphasis on safety training and other aspects of accident prevention continues to be a ranking war need. Quite apart from humanitarian considerations, we simply can not afford this drain on our limited manpower.—Detroit News.

"V. D. B." on Lincoln Pennies.

The letters do not appear on all Lincoln pennies, only on some of those minted in 1909, the treasury having later eliminated that portion of the portraiture from the engraving.

The initials commemorate Victor David Brenner, Russian born, talented artist and sculptor, medalist and designer of the coin.

If the new war penny is a replica of the Lincoln penny, it would be a nice compliment to both its designer and our ally to reinstate the initials "V. D. B."

Clash of Personalities Played Important Role In Coal Crisis

WASHINGTON—What most people don't realize about the coal crisis is that during the one month of long-drawn out negotiations in New York, there wasn't any negotiating at all.

Actually, the mine operators made no proposals or counter-offers to John L. Lewis. For one solid month they sat, in effect telling Lewis:

"You may not like it, John, but this time you have to go before the War Labor Board."

The War Labor Board was the last body the big miner wanted to appear before. There were several reasons. First, some of the labor members of the board are old personal enemies of his. Second, he has strongly suspected Will Davis, WLB chairman, and public member Wayne Morse, of the University of Oregon, of being out to get him.

Finally, he knew that ex-Senator Ed Burke of Nebraska, attorney for the Southern operators, was a bitter foe of FDR's and was suspected, rightly or wrongly, of wanting a strike. Many of the operators individually were quite willing to grant some concessions to the United Mine Workers; but as a group they figured it was good strategy to sit tight and pass the buck on to Lewis's old enemies on the War Labor board.

FDR Vs. John L.

THUS personalities—not excluding the old, bitter enmity between Lewis and Roosevelt personally—played the most important role backstage in bringing on the coal crisis.

Possibly the mine operators might not have been so recalcitrant if they had not received a tip at the very start of negotiations a month ago that the dispute would be sent to the War Labor board anyway.

This tip came in the form of a telegram from the president himself, to both sides, urging a speedy, peaceful settlement and warning that the War Labor board would be called in if necessary.

When Secretary of Labor Perkins read this telegram she immediately saw the implications, and blew up. It was bad strategy, she felt, for the president to intervene so early in the dispute. Also she knew the operators would take this as the tip-off to stage a sit-down until the dispute could be referred on to the War Labor board.

So, calling in WLB Chairman Will Davis, the man credited with drafting the telegram, she lost no time conveying her feelings.

"You've put the boss on the spot," she accused Davis. "You should know better than to get him mixed up in this right now. The time for him to step in is after all other avenues have failed—not before."

Fixing Davis with a critical eye, she added:

"Will, you're too excited over this case."

Davis countered that this was war-time and it was necessary to bring all possible pressure on both Lewis and the operators for a quick settlement without letting the case drag on for weeks. He added that Lewis should not be given "special treatment," but handled like any other labor leader.

"Yes, you say you treat him like other labor leaders, but you don't," shot back Miss Perkins. "You're always putting him on a pedestal, singling him out as a special figure. This telegram proves it."

Davis Irked.

IRKED by the needling, Davis replied: "That's not true. I have only one thought in mind. I want to save my country from a serious strike."

"Well, if you mean that, you are proceeding in the wrong way," responded Miss Perkins.

The WLB chairman challenged this, but Madame Secretary closed the argument.

"Forget it, Will," she said. "This is a battle of nerves and John L. Lewis seems to have got your goat."

Meantime, in New York, the negotiations between Lewis and the coal operators were getting nowhere fast. The operators had interpreted the president's telegram to mean he would have no objections if the case went to the War Labor board, and they were standing pat, hoping for this development. They felt sure that by its past precedents, the board would refuse wage increases.

The president, therefore, sent a memorandum to Secretary Perkins, stating that he understood the negotiations in New York were deadlocked and suggesting that she send John R. Steelman to New York to use his good offices in an attempt to settle this dispute through the orderly processes of collective bargaining.

Steelman Takes Hand.

THAT'S how Steelman, chief of the labor department's conciliation service, entered the wage negotiations as the president's "personal representative." Steelman, a crack conciliator with many aborted strikes to his credit, announced that it was his aim to reach a settlement which would adhere to the president's anti-inflation and wage stabilization principles.

This caused another backstage flare-up. Davis and his WLB colleagues were afraid the public and the mine negotiators would get the idea that Steelman was representing the war labor board. So a WLB delegation called on Miss Perkins and gave her this ultimatum: Unless she issued an immediate press release clearly stating that Steelman was representing only the labor department, not the war labor board, the board would take the mine case out of the labor department's hands.

"Does this mean you are not in favor of having this dispute settled by collective bargaining, without recourse to your board?" Miss Perkins inquired hotly.

WLB members assured her this was not the case, but that they wanted to feel free to disapprove any agreement made by Mr. Steelman, if it was not within the board's "Little Steel" formula. They said it would be difficult to do so if current impressions about his status (as the president's "personal representative") were allowed to continue.

In the end, madame secretary backed down. She issued a press release stating that John Steelman was returning to New York to continue the negotiations, but as the representative of the labor department.

Thus continued the see-saw of personal jealousies, most of them inspired by the basic fact that the White House, instead of appointing a strong secretary of labor, has taken away most of Miss Perkin's powers, creating other independent labor agencies which function sometimes in conflict with the labor department. Over this maze of labor agencies there is no authority except the overworked president himself.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Foolish or Wise?

"HOW MANY apple trees have you planted this spring?" inquired a friend who has been an orchardist — and profitably — for many years.

I told him I had set 250.

"Ah, you are foolish," he remonstrated. "Foolish—a man of your age starting an orchard now! Why I can buy all the orchards I ever could use that are of good bearing age! Life's too short to fool around planting trees when a man can do that!"

I had no answer ready. But that afternoon, I looked up at the rugged slope already planted and was happy at what had been accomplished. Then I observed another portion still in brambles and low worthless shrubs and planned, in my own mind, how it would look when it was cleared, cultivated, planted, pruned and when, some happy spring, I will see the entire slope a paradise of fragrant peach and apple bloom.

Bees worked and droned in the mounting drifts of pink and white, as I imagined them, carrying nectar to my own hives in a row beside the barn, and to the hives of all my neighbors. Cars on the highway slowed, to let riders look and admire the blossoms, and children shouted and sang about the trailing branches without knowing why. Even a tramp, leaned on his cane and smiled, in memory of better days, forgetful of his loneliness . . .

To plant a tree with a maze of golden, fleshy roots dripping with moisture—I dip them in the pond for a few minutes after unheeling them—is a memorable experience.

The hole in the soft sandstone rocky hill must be spacious. Into the bottom I throw a covering of fertile top soil, silt and leafy mold. It is a joy to spread the roots upon, the soft woods dirt, kneel and sift the fine soil about the hairlike roots by hand and tamp it solid with both feet, then use the shovel to finish filling in the hole.

With just such care and fatherly concern I have planted each tree of our home orchard with my own rough hands, nor wished the work to be the task of any other.

The boys and I will help them grow—feed them litter from the stable, cultivate, spray and prune. We will come, in time, to know each of them individually, and when they adorn the slope with rich red and golden fruit—and that time will not be so far away as it may seem—we will have delight in the results of our toil out of all proportion to our investment.

"Life is too short to fool around planting trees?" What do men live for?

I am planting the very best varieties that can be had now, in 1943 . . . and I smile at the thought that, in 1983, and in years before and after, my own grandchildren, or someone else's, will inevitably profit.

There are 31 United Nations and 48 kinds of uniforms for the women of this one.

And the best uniform we've seen to date is a faded housedress.

It is the official uniform of the "stay home and take care of the family" women's auxiliary of the human race.

Despite the de-emphasis of the theory that a woman with a husband and young children should be a home maker before she is anything else it still sounds like a reasonable proposition.

* * *

The WAACS and the WAVES and the coast guard and the marine women's outfits are fine—they have standards which are good standards for enlistment.

* * *

But these volunteer whoop-and-holler outfits with the trick uniforms and no apparent purpose except to get in the way of the war and pose for photographers are getting beyond the beyond.

* * *

It's time some of the ladies running around in the station wagons got back to giving the baby his bottle.

Thought for the day: War is no social organization.

ERNIE PYLE Roving Reporter

An Unforgettable Picture of Soldiers Moving Along a Hilly Tunisian Road.

THE FRONT LINES BEFORE MATEUR—(By Wireless)—We're now with an infantry outfit that has battled ceaselessly for four days and nights.

This northern warfare has been in the mountains. You don't ride much any more. It is walking and climbing and crawling country. The mountains aren't big, but they are constant. They are largely treeless. They are easy to defend and bitter to take. But we are taking them.

The Germans lie on the back slope of every ridge, deeply dug into fox holes. In front of them the fields and pastures are hideous with thousands of hidden mines. The forward slopes are left open, untenanted, and if the Americans tried to scale these slopes they would be murdered wholesale in an inferno of machine-gun crossfire plus mortars and grenades.

Consequently we don't do it that way. We have fallen back to the old warfare of first pulverizing the enemy with artillery, then sweeping around the ends of the hill with infantry and taking them from the sides and behind.

I'VE WRITTEN before how the big guns crack and roar almost constantly throughout the day and night. They lay a screen ahead of our troops. By magnificent shooting they drop shells on the back slopes. By means of shells timed to burst in the air a few feet from the ground, they get the Germans even in their foxholes. Our troops have found that the Germans dig foxholes down and then under, trying to get cover from the shell bursts that shower death from above.

Our artillery has really been sensational. For once we have enough of something and at the right time. Officers tell me they actually have more guns than they know what to do with.

All the guns in any one sector can be centered to shoot at one spot. And when we lay the whole business on a German hill the whole slope seems to erupt. It becomes an unbelievable cauldron of fire and smoke and dirt. Veteran German soldiers say they have never been through anything like it.

NOW to the infantry — the damned infantry, as they like to call themselves.

I love the infantry because they are the underdogs. They are the mud-rain-frost-and-wind-boys. They have no comforts, and they even learn to live without the necessities. And in the end they are the guys that wars can't be won without.

I wish you could see just one of the ineradicable pictures I have in my mind today. In this particular picture I am sitting among clumps of sword-grass on a step and rocky hillside that we have just taken. We are looking out over a vast rolling country to the rear.

A narrow path comes like a ribbon over a hill miles away, down a long slope, across a creek, up a slope and over another hill.

All along the length of this ribbon there is now a thin line of men. For four days and nights they have fought hard, eaten little, washed none, and slept hardly at all. Their nights have been violent with attack, fright, butchery, and their days sleepless and miserable with the crash of artillery.

The men are walking. They are fifty feet apart, for dispersal. Their walk is slow, for they are dead weary, as you can tell even when looking at them from behind. Every line and sag of their bodies speaks their inhuman exhaustion.

On their shoulders and backs they carry heavy steel tripods, machine-gun barrels, leaden boxes of ammunition. Their feet seem to sink into the ground from the overload they are bearing.

They don't slouch. It is the terrible deliberation of each step that spells out their appalling tiredness. Their faces are black and unshaven. They are young men, but the grime and whiskers and exhaustion make them look middle-aged.

In their eyes as they pass is not hatred, not excitement, not despair, not the tonic of their victory—there is just the simple expression of being here as though they had been here doing this forever, and nothing else.

The line moves on, but it never ends. All afternoon men keep coming round the hill and vanishing eventually over the horizon. It is one long tired line of ant-like men.

THERE is an agony in your heart and you almost feel ashamed to look at them. They are just guys from Broadway and Main street, but you wouldn't remember them. They are too far away now. They are too tired.

Their world can never be known to you, but if you could see them just once, just for an instant, you would know that no matter how hard people work back home they are not keeping pace with these infantrymen in Tunisia.

GHOST OF MY LOVE +

By Oren Arnold

CHAPTER XXIX

The old man carried a lantern and it made shadow ghosts everywhere. On one shelf inside, Bill saw the leather box which the British soldiers had turned over to Rosemary. "That there's money," Uncle Pete pointed to it. "More'n $22,000, yep. Used to keep two and three times that in here, though. This other bag is my biggest Bible, son. I keep canvas around it. And this here is a picture of Grover Cleveland. He helped congress once to—"

"Yes, yes, I know. But all I want is the gun."

"Here it is."

Bill strode away. He heard the vault door creak shut, but his mind was ahead of him. Without further interruption he went to his car and drove off. Uncle Pete followed to the front porch. The old man stood there alone, meditating, trying to understand.

Up the canyon a few blocks then, came a bugle call. "Ta ta Ta-a-a-a—" It was long, and slow, and insinuating in strange, haunting melody. In truth it was nothing but taps sounded in routine way by the bugler for the soldiers up there. But to Uncle Pete it was downright ominous.

"Daggone," he murmured. "Sounds like a funeral dirge!"

From her window on the third floor, Rosemary also had watched Bill departing. And the bugle call gave her almost the same reaction.

Rosemary went to bed at 10 o'clock but it was 3 a. m. before she slept. Next morning at breakfast she knew she would have to leave here as soon as she could. Perhaps she could go today, or at least tomorrow. It depended on Bill. He wasn't even back! Gone all night. Hunting Harry Boyle. She tried to keep her mind off it, and she wanted to go in to Option herself and try to prevent trouble. But problems were crowding in on her here.

Sergeant Wayne brought the first one. The water sluice was broken by a small landslide, and she had to direct the repairing. Then, covering Bill's absence, she had to get the work started for everybody, cleaning out the buildings and putting them in shape. Finally, Bill himself returned at noon.

Rosemary ran out to his car, questions in her eyes.

"I went in looking for Boyle," he said at once. "I couldn't find him. I will yet. But my first duty is here."

"Bill, you must let me talk to you."

"Later," said he, grimly.

"You can do no good now, fighting Harry!"

"That's my affair, Rosemary. But he had gone to San Francisco, I was told. As soon as this project is well under way—" He left it as a threat and a promise. Rosemary could get no more out of him, indeed he seemed to avoid her all that afternoon.

* * *

At 5 p m a delegation of the young Britishers came with a request.

"Could we have the campfire party tonight, sir?" they asked Bill.

"Why not? You've worked hard. You deserve it. Take a truck up that canyon trail and bring down lots of wood. After supper, crowd around and let go!"

"Right sir! Thanks!"

The youths filled with their idea. And not one but two trucks went for wood. Within that same hour the stack of it resembled some crazy leaning tower of Pisa there in the center of Cody street. All the light in Rosemary's third floor room go out, and he sat on his porch a long time waiting for Bill to retire in the second floor room, nearer to him. Finally, he himself got up and disappeared, toward his horse corral.

Bill had told the soldiers they had till midnight. Tomorrow, their officers would be here, and this was their free night to howl. But he himself lay down in darkness. He didn't sleep. The distant singing and laughter drifted in. He should have slept, for he was up all the night before. But things gnawed at his mind.

An hour passed. By 11:30 o'clock the hotel was silent. Even the singing up the street was lower, more melodious now. Bill still felt the haunting, youthful lure of it. And then, without warning—

"Scree-e-e-e-ek, clank-clank!

Bill sat up in bed. He heard the next—scree-e-ek!

It was the unmistakable sound of the vault door that he had heard with Uncle Pete last night. He remembered the money stored there! He felt in his dresser drawer for the huge key to the vault. It was gone.

In 10 seconds he was out of his room tiptoeing down. He moved like one of Lightning's ghosts around the stair well, through the hotel office and past the clerk's desk. The vault was 12 feet along a corridor. Just enough light came from the campfire to show him the open iron door. A man's form appeared, coming out.

"All right, drop what you've got!" Bill commanded.

Bang!

A pistol shot answered him. Then more shots.

Bill had dropped to a squatting position. He cursed himself now for not bringing his own gun. But when he could see the form again, he leaped on it. Upstairs somewhere in the darkness, Rosemary screamed and came running down.

Bump! The two men clinched and groaned. Coins rattled in the leather box.

"Bill . . . Bill!" Rosemary yelled, nearer at hand.

"Get back!" he shouted at her. "Somebody raided the vault!"

Bill drove his fist hard at the dark form before him, felt it strike flesh. But the other man swung his foot sideways at Bill's ankles and downed him. The form leaped over Bill, ran down the little corridor. Struggling to his feet, Bill followed.

The man leaped through the front door off the porch. Bill glimpsed only a form huddled over like a literal ghost.

Crack! . . . Crack!

Two rifle shots came then, from somewhere outside. The running ghost toppled headlong and rolled down the rocky hill.

SOLDIERS LAUD AGE MANDATE

Recent Ruling Meets With Approval of Men In Service.

(By International News Service)

FORT LOGAN, Colo.—The new ruling that men over 38 should not be drafted into the armed forces has met with the approval of students at the Fort Logan clerical school according to the weekly column compiled by the camp's newspapers, News and Views. It declared that the soldiers felt men past 38 are too old for the army.

Some of the opinions expressed are as follows:

Pvt. Michael Rivnyak, 30, former teacher: "It is an excellent idea because a man over 38 does not have the endurance and stamina of a youngster. He usually is better equipped for his particular phase of life in the business world."

Pvt. Arthur A. Connor, 43, former vegetable stand proprietor: "Not only do I think the new ruling will produce a better army and navy, but I think a more perfect standard could have been effected, particularly from the physical standpoint, if they had been left at home to labor."

Pvt. Miles Dutton, 34, former teacher: "In my opinion this is one of the most sensible rulings ever made. From observation and experience, since my induction, I find that due to army procedure, they are expected to cope with physically younger boys. The mind is willing, but the body is not. Then they do not adjust themselves as readily."

Pvt. Walter M. Heidbreder, 27, former motor car company manager: "Men over 38 have difficulty in drilling and as a rule do not seem to be able to adapt themselves to the army as well as younger men. The army, in my opinion, is for younger men."

Public Staircase In County Office Causes Lawsuit

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — (INS) — There is a public staircase right in the middle of Register of Probate Arthur W. Sullivan's office in the courthouse building and he wants it removed.

It disturbs his work, he says.

A legal contest between Sullivan and the Courthouse commission began a year ago and has reached the stage of a hearing before Judge Vincent Brogna in Suffolk Superior court.

Sullivan seeks to compel the commission to remove the staircase and steps it erected in the center of a room which is part of his office. He claims the stairs and platform are to be used by the public and such use disrupts the work of his office.

He asserts the commission's action is improper interference with his official duties and that, under the law, he has the care, custody and control of the registry.

Wilfred G. Booth Takes Miss Grace Culp As Bride

Lovely Wedding Service Read In Chapel In Which Bride's Sisters Were Wed; Nuptials Read By Dr. Louis F. Reef.

CHOOSING as the scene of her wedding the chapel in which her sisters were wed, Miss Grace Culp, daughter of Atty. and Mrs. Frank S. Culp, 386 Marion avenue, was united in marriage with Wilfred G. Booth of Cleveland.

The wedding ceremony was performed Saturday at 4 p. m. in Christ chapel of the Church of the Covenant, Euclid avenue, in Cleveland. Dr. Louis F. Reef, assisant pastor of the church read the nuptial service.

Preceding the ceremony, Charles Allen Rebstock, minister of music at the church, played "Evening Star" from "Tannhaueser, "Ich Liebe Dich" by Grieg and "Song of Love" by Liszt. The familiar "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin," by Wagner, was played as the bride made her appearance, on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was used as the recessional.

The couple was unattended. Neal Faxner, brother-in-law of the bride, served as usher.

Tall seven-branched candelabra of wrought iron, holding white tapers furnished illumination, and were decorated with salal leaves and calla lilies tied with white satin bows.

For her wedding the bride chose a lovely white sheer wool street length dress, with which she wore white accessories. Her hat was a ruffled white straw. Her hat was veil held in place by tiny bows. Her shoulder corsage was of Talisman roses, yellow daisies and geranium leaves, tied with peach and pale yellow ribbons.

Mrs. Culp, mother of the bride, wore a dark green dress, with beige and luggage tan accessories. Mrs. Booth, the bride-groom's mother, was attired in a navy blue trimmed in white, with which she wore navy accessories. Both wore orchid corsages.

The bride's four sisters presided at the reception, which followed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Gilbert. Refreshments were served from a table centered with a beautiful arrangement of white roses, white sweet peas, and maiden hair fern. White candles in crystal candelabra were used for lighting.

Late in the day the newly married couple left for a short honeymoon. Upon their return, they will reside at 2044 Cornell road, in Cleveland. For traveling, the new Mrs. Booth wore a green tweed suit, with yellow and brown accessories, and a boutoniere of buttercups.

Mrs. Booth was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school and Dyke School of Commerce at Cleveland. She is a private secretary to the manager of the surety company of the New Amsterdam Casualty company.

Fashions for Ladies In Waiting--1943 Model

STORK DRESS: Green and white coin dot, adjustable at waist, by Eloise Glover.

By DOROTHY ROE
(AP Fashion Editor)

Prepare to bow down before Uncle Sam's Victory Babies. Two million, eight hundred thousand of them have booked passage with the stork for 1943. They're probably the most important generation in history, since to them will fall the task of remaking the battered old world.

Such distinguished babies deserve attractive mothers, which is one reason why the American dress industry has undergone a recent revolution in the general concept of maternity clothes.

Today's prospective mothers are younger and prettier than ever before. Many of them wear junior sizes, and demand junior styles.

No longer is the all-enveloping wraparound the uniform of young ladies-in-waiting. Nowadays shops are showing "expectancy" frocks as gay, youthful and deceptive as the country's best designing skill can make them.

For summer, nothing could be better than two or three crisp cottons, in gay colors, cut on becoming lines for prospective mothers.

Modern doctors advise future mothers to lead as normal a life as possible before the baby comes.

So perk up, and look your prettiest for that important young individual who may be president in 1975.

BYE, BABY BUNTING: Papa's gone a-hunting Japs, but Mom has made you smart and snug in an all-cotton layette complete from bunting to bibs and diapers to dresses.

Mrs. Lewis chose a flowered ensemble with rose accessories, while the bridegroom's mother wore a grey suit with blue accessories. They both wore corsages of gardenias.

A reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. William Rathburn, 258 Saxton road, for thirty people. Luncheon was served buffet style. A wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom centered the table.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

The brown eyes of John Hayes widened as I told him the criminal status of his foster aunt, but he gave no further indication of surprise.

"I can believe anything of her," he said bitterly, "after what she asked me to do.

"I hadn't seen her for a long time," he said. "She'd been down in South America with another brother for years, as I suppose you know."

"Yes, I know," I assented, not caring to interrupt by telling him that Ruth had made more than one trip back to the United States during those years.

"I didn't know she had returned to this country," he went on, "so you can imagine how surprised I was when her name was sent into my dressing room.

Threatened By Ruth.

"I sent word to have her come in, although I did not want to see her. When she came in there was no cordiality in her attitude, for which I was glad, and she went directly to the point.

"She said she wished me to come and tell you that if your friend, Katharine Bickett, did not immediately tell me the whereabouts of her husband, Jack Bickett, she would have published in the newspapers certain stories, for which she said she had ample proof, the principal one being about a divorce proceeding recently started by Jack Bickett against his wife, and naming Dr. Hal Meredith as co-respondent.

"She started to make threats of what she would do to me if I did not do as she asked, but I quickly told her that I would come and tell you what she had said. I thought that was the quickest way to get rid of her."

Madge Approves.

Seeing the agitated entreaty in his voice and eyes, I put my hand over his with an encouraging gesture.

"Dear lad, I do believe you," I said, "and when I tell you that she already has seen Dr. Meredith and threatened him with a similar story, and that he also came directly to me, you may be assured that you followed exactly the right course in pretending to agree to her terms."

"You cannot know how glad I am to hear you say that," he said. "I never did a harder thing in my life."

"I can well believe that," I told him smiling, but he hurried on.

"And now, dear Mrs. Graham, is there anything I can do to help you put that woman where she can do no more harm? Please believe me, I have no scruple about dealing harshly with her. She deserves anything that can happen to her—anything."

I had to believe that his pleasant voice could be so packed with venom.

"I agree with you on that last count," I told him, "and you can do a great deal for us. First, when did she say you must have this information for her?"

"Tomorrow night," he answered.

"That's too short a time," I said "We shan't be ready for her then."

How to Be a Bathing Beauty

Tub time is beauty time for working wives.

By BETTY CLARKE
(AP Beauty Editor)

Dear Housewives:

Make the most of everything! You hear that all around, and it strikes at beauty too.

Times have changed. No more afternoons at the beauty salon, the golf club, bridge parties or teas. You're buckling down like grandma did in her day. Doing your own housework, cooking, gardening, washing, ironing, and war work as well.

But don't let it tell on you. Poor sleep, furrowed foreheads, tense mouths, skin prematurely dry and wrinkled from a bad case of war nerves can make you old before your time. Be on the alert for them as the beauty saboteurs they are. Give more thought to facial mannerisms, daily habits and posture. Deep breathing, which brightens the skin, is largely dependent on straight shoulders and head held high.

Above all, make the most of your bath for relaxation. Don't think of it as just a quick way to get clean. It can be so much more. Yes, a beauty bath, if you please!

First tuck your curls up and go to work on your face. Warm water and a soap that has refreshing, deep-pore cleansing qualities and a fragrance of lavender. (Going back to granny, remember hearing of lavender as her beauty aid?) Lather your face as your hubby does, sans washcloth. Rinse and dry thoroughly, then smooth on generously a night cream containing lanolin. It helps to restore the normal flow of oils to a skin under par.

And now you're ready for a luxurious tubbing, so run your bath. (Granny added oatmeal.) Well, here's some news for you. There's a combination of lavender, cereals and other ingredients that's lovelier than granny's method. Add a couple handfulls of it to your water and find out for yourself. You'll want to lie there for hours—and why not? It's the best beauty treatment I know.

Rise From Stunt Men.

Two ex-stunt men who have attained greatest fame as roly-poly comedians appear together in "It Ain't Hay," now playing at the Ohio. One of them is Lou Costello, and the other is Eugene Pallette, veteran of 30 years in pictures. Almost every fan who has witnessed Abbott and Costello's rise knows that Lou once was a stunt man in silent films. Pallette was once a 135-pound stunt man and later leading man who appeared opposite many of the stars of the early film era. "It Ain't Hay" also features Grace McDonald, Cecil Kelleway, Patsy O'Connor, Richard Lane and Leighton Noble and his orchestra.

Goodman's Band.

Benny Goodman, commonly called the "king of swing," brings his "jive" band to the screen once again in the new United Artists release, "The Powers Girl," now showing at the Madison. Benny gives out on his clarinet and his band's music furnish much of the zest and color to the picture. Dennis Day, singing star of the Jack Benny radio program, is also featured. Carole Landis, George Murphy and Anne Shirley play the leading roles in the film which deals with the ambitions of a small-town girl to make good as a John R. Powers' model. Co-attraction at the Madison is "Taxi, Mister," starring William Bendix and Grace Bradley.

Genuine Jungle.

More than 100,000 trees and scrubs were used to build settings for Sol Lesser's RKO Radio picture, "Tarzan Triumphs," starring Johnny Weissmuller. A genuine jungle has been created as a setting for Tarzan's adventure as he battles the Nazi parachute troops who have invaded the contented peace of his jungle home. In addition to Weissmuller, Frances Gifford, in the role of Zandra, a jungle princess, and Johnny Sheffield as Tarzan, jr., are featured. The Ritz Brothers, Al, Harry and Jimmy, headline the cast of the co-attraction, "Behind the 8-Ball."

Rogers' Film.

Heralded as "King of Cowboys," Roy Rogers' latest Republic western is named after Roy himself "King of the Cowboys" is now playing at the Park. Rogers first came into prominence when he organized the "Sons of the Pioneers" western band. Republic signed him in 1938 and awarded him the starring role in "Under Western Stars." He has made nearly 40 pictures since then. Claudette Colbert and Joel McCrea co-star in the other picture, "The Palm Beach Story."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

A VALUABLE SINGLETON

Most players are prone to undervalue the possession of a king when it is not guarded with another card of its same suit. A majority count it as only worth a half a chance to take a trick, even when guarded. But the honor just below the ace will produce many more tricks than that for your side, in the long run. Think of what it does to a guarded queen in your partner's hand, or how mighty it is as a trick-taker when your partner has the ace and at least one other card. Still another use is its ability to make a particular opponent take it when you are building an end-play, or its effect in making certain squeeze plays work.

♠ J ♥ 10 9 5 2 ♦ 10 5 4 3 ♣ Q 9 7 3	N W E S	♠ 10 5 3 ♥ Q 8 4 ♦ J 9 7 2 ♣ A 8 2
	♠ A 7 6 2 ♥ K 7 3 ♦ A K Q 8 6 ♣ K

(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

Pass	3 ♠	Pass	5 ♠
Pass	6 ♠

That singleton club in South's hand proved a vital factor in the making of the contract, even though it did not take a trick. Its sole value was in keeping west from gaining the lead when the crucial trick arrived, compelling East to take it.

East feared that a lead from any of his side suits might build up a trick for the declarer—sound logic—so opened his spade 3 as probably the least damaging. North cleared trumps in three rounds, scored three high diamonds for club discards, and ruffed a fourth diamond in his own hand, being happy to find the suit remainders evenly split. He returned to his hand with the heart K and used the fifth diamond for a discard of his next to the last club.

He had reckoned that East's trump lead was to avoid underleading honors in other suits and that therefore he very likely had both the club A and the heart Q. Now he tested his findings by leading the club K. Sure enough, East had to win it, and had no alternative but to lead from his heart Q into the A-J, or else a club, which could be ruffed in one hand while the other discarded. He selected the heart, so North got two tricks in that suit, the last then being trumps in both hands. If West had been able to win that tenth trick he could have led through the heart tenace instead of up to it.

Tomorrow's Problem.

	♠ 5 4 ♥ A 9 4 ♦ K 7 4 2 ♣ K J 8 6
♠ K J 9 3 ♥ J 8 ♦ J 6 ♣ Q 10 4 3 2	N W E S	♠ 10 7 6 2 ♥ K Q 10 7 6 2 ♦ 9 ♣ 7 5
	♠ A Q 8 ♥ 5 3 ♦ A Q 10 8 5 3 ♣ A 9

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

What method should South employ to make a maximum score on this deal while playing at 3-No Trumps, the lead from West being the spade 3?

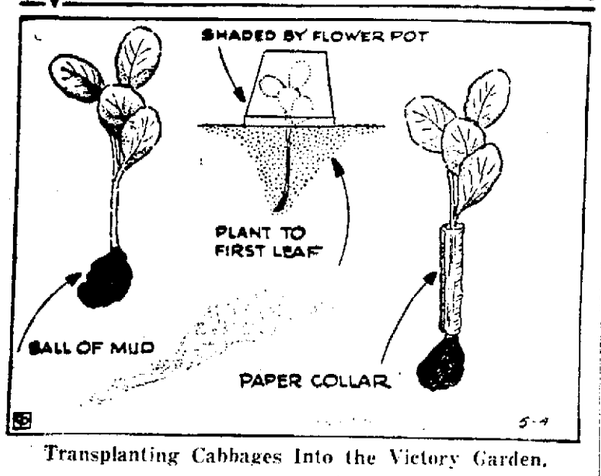
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Transplanting Cabbages Into the Victory Garden.

(Released by Central Press Association)

VICTORY GARDEN beginners are apt to assume that cabbage plants are tough and therefore give them little consideration and care. This, of course, is a mistake, for care in transplanting cabbage plants is needed. If given proper care in transplanting the plants will respond to it and will not wilt down before their roots have taken hold. When properly protected the cabbage plants are better able to withstand insect enemies and disease.

If the young plants are to be lifted from a flat for transplanting it is best to water the plants a short time before handling them so that the soil will be moist enough to cling to their roots in a ball, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

Cabbage plants can be transplanted with safety even during dry weather if they are set deep in the soil, that is, with the soil coming up to the first leaf, as illustrated. Make the hole deep enough to permit the roots of the plant to be placed straight down without crowding them. Firm the soil against the length of both roots and stem to prevent the formation of air pockets. Water the plants thoroughly and protect them from the sun for a day or two by covering with flower pots, berry boxes or newspapers, as illustrated.

The plants can also be protected against the attacks of cutworms by wrapping a four-inch collar of paper around the stem of each plant when transplanting it, as illustrated. Allow the paper collar to extend about one and one-half or two inches above the soil level about the plants.

DETERMINED

OAKLAND, Cal. — (U.P.) — Rather than be denied service in the war, because of his 68 years of age, Dr. Philip S. Potter, famous author and college professor of pediatrics, gave up his rank as colonel in the army medical reserve corps and accepted the bars of a lieutenant at the California quartermaster depot here. He served in World war I as an army surgeon. His father was on the staff of Gen. Phil Sheridan.

Legal Aid Clinic Solves Problems Of Flying Cadets

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — (INS) — The worried flying cadet wanted to know if he was married, and the San Antonio Aviation Cadet Center's Legal Aid clinic got the answer.

The young woman with whom he had gone through a marriage ceremony had told him her husband, a sergeant in a foreign port, was dead.

Legal Aid checked with Washington; the sergeant wasn't reported on any casualty list. They informed the cadet, two days after he submitted his question, that he wasn't married.

Members of the San Antonio Bar association take turns making a weekly visit to the Cadet Center, providing their services without charge for all the legal red tape that might otherwise be distracting a pilot trying to earn his wings. They make wills, arrange divorces, help out romances, and answer all sorts of questions.

ARRESTS DOWN

ROANOKE, N. C. — (U.P.) — Roanoke can attribute its decreasing jail population to whisky rationing and jobs offered by war industry.

City Jailer J. C. James said, "We had only 76 guests for dinner the other day. Rationing of whisky by the ABC board has reduced the number of 'Monday morning' drunks appreciably."

According to James, the jail's population is 180 and for years the jail capacity has run around that figure.

PARENTS OF DAUGHTER

GALION — A daughter was born at City hospital Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Lester Loucks, 210 East Main street, Crestline.

SOLID UNITY ON HOME FRONT WANTED BY MEN IN SERVICE

(By International News Service)

MOBILE, Ala. — A lot more planes and a lot more ships — but most of all the boys on the American battle fronts want to get news about solid unity on the home front, Ensign C. L. Adams, who participated in the Battle of Midway, said while on a brief visit home from the wars.

"When a fighting man picks up a newspaper and reads of disputes at home, it doesn't set so good with him," Ensign Adams said. He added:

"He's depending on those at home. He realized that he can't strike and he wonders why those who are building for victory hold up shipments of necessary materials of war."

Those were strong words from a mere ensign, but as one who has been in navy service for eight years, and who has been in the thick of the battle against the Japanese, Adams seemed to be speaking the sentiments of the ordinary fighting man of the line.

"If every man who holds up the war effort were put in uniform and given a little taste of the hell overseas," he said, "he'd be willing and glad to come back to the States and work and sweat every day until this fight is over."

As for himself, Adams said, he was glad to see his wife, but he didn't want too long a furlough in these critical times. "I'd sure like to get back in there and scrap some more," he said.

WHICH IS WHICH?

SEASIDE, Ore. — (U.P.) — Charles and John Hickey, 18-year-old twins, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Hickey, are stationed with the navy at Norfolk, Va. They report that since receiving regulation navy haircuts, their associates can not tell which is which.

Ravens Imitate Fighter Planes In Aleutians

AN ARMY OUTPOST IN THE ALEUTIANS — (U.P.) — Even the wildlife in the Aleutians has been militarized, according to Capt. Acton Blewitt, of Cul De Sac, Idaho, company commander of a unit camped in a wild valley on the slopes of an Aleutian volcano.

"Since our arrival here," Captain Blewitt said, "the blue foxes have learned to stand in the chow line and the ravens are beginning to fly in military formations."

The men in Captain Blewitt's company support his assertions that the fat, playful, highly intelligent ravens imitate the maneuvers of fighter planes based in the Aleutians. They maintain that the birds not only fly in echelons and peel off in attack dives, but they also occasionally poke fun at the air corps by making extremely bumpy and unbirdlike landings.
